BRITISH SHATTER TWO GERMAN ASSAULTS

Germans Sustain Heavy Losses---British Take Prisoners and Machine Guns---Successful Raids on Flanders Front.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, April 2.—Two German counter-assaults delivered at the point of their salient between Luce rivulet and at the Avre river, were shattered by British artillery fire, the war office reported today.

The Germans lost heavily. During the course of fighting in that sector the British captured fifty prisoners and thirteen machine guns.

In the Hebuterne sector near the northern end of the fighting zone, the British carried out a successful enterprise, capturing 73 more prisoners. During Monday afternoon the Germans delivered counter-thrusts in that sector, but were thrown back.

There were successful British raids on the West Flanders front. "Between the Avre and the Luce the British captured fifty prisoners and 13 machine guns during the course of the fighting there on Monday afternoon.

"The British found a great number of German dead upon the fighting field.

"Later in the day the Germans made two counter attacks, but they were repulsed by British artillery fire.

"The enemy sustained heavy losses.

"In the Hebuterne sector the British carried out a local enterprise, capturing 73 prisoners.

"An enemy counter attack in the same district was broken up.

"In the sector of Achieville and at Hollebeke, in West Flanders, the British made successful raids."

The war office report indicated that the fighting had again died down on that part of the Picardy battle front held by the British.

London, April 2.—Another German drive in the direction of Arras is indicated by the development of the past 36 hours in the great battle of Picardy.

There was a comparative lull in the fighting while both sides rushed reinforcements of men and guns to the front and the fighting that took place late Monday was described in the official reports as local.

The German drive slackened all along the line before the desperate resistance of the British and French armies.

Allied airmen (including Americans) reported that the Germans were massing troops in the sector of Albert and that the "heavies" were being moved up. Hitherto the Germans have been striking in a southwesterly direction towards Amiens from Albert, but there were indications that the new German blows would be directed towards the north in the direction of Arras.

The gallant British and French armies have pressed back the Germans at some points, recapturing part of the ground which the Germans had succeded in overrunning.

The chief center of the German attack has been the district east of the British base of Amiens. A number of heavy assaults were made in that sector, but all broke down before the powerful resistance of the allied armies.

The Germans claim to have captured the heights north of Moreuil and that they have increased the number of prisoners in their hands to more than 75,000.

There was a terrific struggle for Grivesnes, which lies just north of Montdidier.

Supported by light artillery the German columns made a number of fruitless assaults against the defences of the village. Every time they were hurled back leaving a mound of dead as a monument of their unsuccess.

To the north of Grivesnes, between Moreuil and Hangard-en-Santerre, the Germans claim to have captured Arrachis Wood, but no mention of fighting in that region has been reported by the British war office.

Arrachis Wood is slightly less than ten miles from Amiens and lies north of the Amiens-Montdidier road.

In spite of bad weather the aviators and artillery have continued extremely active on both sides. Mist and rain made observation impossible, but the gunners have maintained ceaseless activity throwing shells against registered targets.

The rain has turned the roads and fields to deep mud which has hindered the Germans in bringing their artillery up to the front.

There has been slight change in the general battle line during the past 24 hours, the advantages all being with the allies.

The German troops concentrations and the trend of their activities indicate that another phase of the battle is imminent and that a tremendous effort will be made to converge on Amiens from the northeast and southeast.

In this event American soldiers probably will play an important part in this stage of the struggle as there is every indication that Americans are now ready to take their place on the firing line in this unprecedented combat.

(An official statement given out in London last night stated that large American forces will be brought to the aid of the Anglo-French armies in France. American troops that are not yet sufficiently trained to fight as divisions and army corps, will form part of seasoned British and French units until they have completed their training. Arrangements for the transportation of these additional forces are now being completed, the official announcement stated.)

The number of German prisoners and captured machine guns in the hands of the British and French is increasing daily. This shows a steady ascendancy in the initiative of the allies and forecasts complete failure for the great German offensive.

As the situation stands on this thirteenth day of the drive, the Germans have advanced between thirty-five and forty miles capturing a number of wrecked towns and villages, but they have fallen far short of their objective. The original German plan was to drive a wedge between the British and French armies, taking Amiens and turning the flank of both opposing armies. Hindenburg is as far from success in this program as he was before the campaign opened.

Heavy losses and the necessity of withdrawing shattered divisions have compelled the Germans voluntarily to slacken their pressure. The British and French have been sparing in the use of their reserves, yielding ground rather than throw fresh troops into the battle. The strategy of this evidently is to wait until the Germans have reached the maximum of their exhaustion, then hurl a huge fresh army against them. The chances for success then would be much greater than it the allies had used up the major portion of their reserve forces in an effort to check the Teutonic advance.

Military critics are beginning to see more and more ground for hope that this will prove the Waterloo for Germany.

WAR DOGS CARRY GERMAN ORDERS

American Front Line Telephone System Useless — Germans Strengthen Their Position.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

With the American Army in France, April 1.—(6 p. m.)—The American forces today obtained accurate information that the work of their intelligence department has been so effective that the German system of telephonic communication in advance support positions is practically useless. The Boche positions are "tapped" by ground sets, by means of which the Americans listen in, and 'phone communication is useless for a depth of almost two miles. The Germans are obliged to rely exclusively on runners or dogs. Great numbers of the war dogs are observable in the vicinity of German listening and observation posts.

This delay in communication greatly hampers the work of the enemy in co-ordinating artillery and infantry attacks.

Due to the poor quality of the metals used, the Germans fail to overhear much of the American conversation when they try to cut in on American 'phone lines.

Despite shortage of raw materials, the [illegible] is expending a great amount of metal in reinforcing the barbed entanglements opposite the [illegible] Teuf Teuf. Giant wire [illegible] is [illegible] rooted deeply into the ground and large auger-like metal appliances bored into the earth. Setting these stakes is partially noiseless. There is none of the circus morning rattle of wooden stakes and mallets. The Germans have been working hard on their entanglements for several days.

American patrol parties have discovered that several successive strands of wire have been installed on the outer side of the entanglements, and along the side nearest the German trenches. These are equipped with a new device which enables a sentry to send a charge through them, which gives off sparks and thus inspect them from a distance.

The great drawback to the enemy of the system is that a single American high explosive shell upsets the wire, effectively kills the electrical contact and necessitates great expenditure of labor by the enemy in repairs.

BIGGER PARADE FOR OUR BOYS FRIDAY

Line of March Will be From Offices of Exemption Boards on Main Street and Everybody Will Have Chance to Take Part or See It.

Weather and street conditions have changed considerably since the last detail of Ulster county boys left for Camp Upton, and in honor of the boys who will leave from Divisions No. 1 and 2 on Friday morning for Camp Dix, the parade committee has decided to have a longer line of march and instead of escorting the boys from the armory to the depot, they will be escorted from the respective offices of the local exemption boards on Main street.

The change was decided on this morning after a conference between representatives of the organizations which are to take part in the parade, with some of the boys and their families and with citizens who desire to march in the citizen's division.

There will be two bands which will be provided for the paraders and plenty of music at the station when entertainment takes place. There are many people who have taken part in each of the parades already held who desire to show honor to the boys, and others who have not had an opportunity to do so. The fine weather will afford everyone who does not take part in the parade ample opportunity to line the streets through which the parade will pass, and to show their appreciation of the boys.

The line of march will be from Main street through Clinton avenue, Albany avenue, Broadway and Railroad avenue to the West Shore depot where the boys will entrain on the train which leaves at nine o'clock.

The change has necessitated a change in the orders of the grand marshal which as revised will be published later.

FARM LABOR AGENCY FOR COUNTY

The Freeman has been designated by the U. S. Department of Labor as Farm Labor Agency No. 42 and will co-operate in that capacity with the Ulster County Farm Bureau and whoever may be appointed by the State Food Commission. The part of The Freeman will be to give publicity to the Labor Agency, not to attempt to handle and place men on farms. This will be done at the office of the Farm Bureau. It is only on this condition that The Freeman consented to accept the appointment, which it considers unnecessary, although the Department of Labor seems to think otherwise and has insisted that the appointment be accepted. The Farm Bureau has always had all the publicity it asked for and would have it in this connection just the same, without thrusting any official appointment upon The Freeman.

STATEMENT OF MAYOR'S REASONS

Why He Vetoed the Ordinance Passed by the Common Council Relative to Proposed Increase of License Rates of Theaters, Auction Sales, Etc.

As told in The Freeman at the time, Mayor Canfield vetoed the ordinance passed by the common council relative to the proposed increase in license rates of places of amusement, peddlers, auction sales, etc.

The mayor's statement telling why he vetoed the ordinance is interesting. The statement follows:

The Honorable, the Common Council of the City of Kingston.

Gentlemen:—I herewith return to you for further consideration the ordinance passed by your Honorable Body at your meeting of March 5 last, which amended the city ordinance "to license and regulate hawking, peddling, night fakirs, auction sales and public entertainments."

The original ordinance provides that the license shall be issued by the chief of police and be countersigned by the mayor. The amendment passed provides for the issuing of a license, but fails to designate any city official as the person to issue such license and fails to clothe any city official with such power. I am of the opinion that the words "from the chief of police and countersigned by the mayor" were inadvertently left out and were probably intended to have been inserted, which should be done.

I am of the opinion that in some respects this amendment is an improvement upon the original provisions. I further believe that it does not completely accomplish the results intended and desired. As to motion picture houses, it provides for a license fee in proportion to the seating capacity of the place licensed. I believe that this is fair and just. As to vaudeville licenses and theater licenses it makes no distinction between the place with a capacity of one hundred and that of one thousand capacity. It also fixes a combined license fee the same for a small as for a large theater. In other words, the small theater with a seating capacity of three hundred pays $25 for a motion picture license, while the place with a seating capacity of one thousand pays $40; but the small place must pay $25 for a vaudeville license or an equal fee with the large place; and the small and the large place would both be taxed the same for a combined motion picture and vaudeville license, the fee to each being $50; and each would pay $150 for a combined theater, opera, motion picture and vaudeville license, and each would pay $125 for a theater or opera license. This would seem to me to be unfair and unequitable.

I would suggest also that the fee for a shooting gallery be $10 per year as the only person in the city who conducts the same has only been compelled to pay $5 per year in the past. The introducer stated it was his intention in revising such fee to lower it as an incentive to more rifle practice. It would appear to me, therefore, that it should not be raised from $5 to $20.

I further call you attention to the fact that the date set forth in section 2 thereof should be the date when the ordinance shall take effect and not February 6, 1918, or any past date.

I again call your attention to the provision of our charter which says "every ordinance, rule, regulation and bylaw shall be published in the two newspapers, designated for such purpose by the common council, before it takes effect." I believe the past custom in providing for such publication in the ordinance before it became effective should be followed. The question of the necessity thereof has been raised in the past and I do not believe that it is good or sound policy to run any risk as to the legality thereof because of any such omission.

I annex hereto a revised amendment which covers the points I have raised and which I submit for your consideration.

Your respectfully,
PALMER CANFIELD, JR.,
Mayor.

PRIVATE HARRY LUCAS.

AMERICAN FLYERS IN ACTIVE SERVICE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

With The American Army In France, April 1.—American aviators are fighting on the Somme front under a son of a former governor of Minnesota. He is a major and commands the first American squadron, except the Lafayette Escadrille, to get into action in the big fight.

"The men of my command are making a magnificent showing," he declared today. "Americans should be proud of them."

The major has a magnificent physique and ordinarily ruddy cheeks but when he emerged from the battle for a brief rest he looked thin and sallow.

"You would look thin, too, if you had been through that hell," he said. "Shells are continuously breaking beneath and around you. Boche machine guns and other planes are after you every minute and every time you stop in a village to rest it is bombed and shelled."

The major referred to in Wales' despatch is undoubtedly Major Cushman A. Rice, one of the most picturesque characters in the American army. His career reads like a page from fiction. He has fought in South American revolutions, is a veteran of the Spanish-American War, was chief of scouts for General Lawton in the Philippines, and also took part in putting down the Boxer rebellion in China. It is reported that the late Richard Harding Davis wrote his "Captain Macklin" after hearing of Rice's exploits in a South American revolution. Rice has hunted big game in all parts of the world, was an amateur auto race driver and when in New York, where he lived most of the time, he was one of the figures along the Great White Way.

When America entered the war, Rice immediately applied for a commission. He retired from the army after the Spanish-American war as a captain. Running into some delay in getting his commission Rice, wanting to get "Over there," enlisted as a private in the aviation corps. In a month he was a "top" sergeant and in a few more months he was made a major and given charge of a squadron.

BR'DWAY CROSSING INQUEST THURSDAY

Tragedy That Resulted in Death of Three Men Will Be Investigated by Coroner Kelly at That Time—Many Witnesses.

Coroner E. A. Kelly has decided to hold a coroner's inquest in the Broadway tragedy that resulted in the death of three men and the injuries to a number of others when a Broadway trolley car was hit by the New York newspaper train in March, at the court house Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. A number of witnesses will be called to testify and the coroner will endeavor to place the blame for the accident at the inquest. The police force are busy today notifying the various witnesses to be present at the inquest when their testimony will be taken.

City Employes Strike.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Baltimore, Md., April 2.—Two thousand city employes, approximately two-thirds of the laborers employed by the city, are on strike today for a general advance in wages. They seek union labor support. Facing an almost complete tie-up of many departments, the administration today advertised for men and boys to drive teams and clean the streets.

BRIEF REVIEW OF THE BATTLE NEWS

Although fighting slackened along the British section of the Picardy battle front, it is believed to be only a lull before a fresh storm bursts forth.

For forty-eight hours the Germans have been massing troops north and south of the Somme river, evidently preparing for new blows against the Anglo-French positions east of the base city of Amiens.

The Germans have been hampered in getting heavy artillery to new positions by rain which turned the roads and fields to deep mud.

Savage assaults have been launched by the Germans against the French front in the Grivesnes sector, northwest of Montdidier, but the French lines withstood the pounding.

In the valley of the Luce rivulet the Germans were outfought and compelled to give ground.

"Appreciable progress has been made at various points between Demuin and the Somme river," the French war office announced.

Again the Germans have sustained tremendous new losses.

It is possible that the Germans plan a new double movement against Amiens by striking simultaneously west of Albert and west of Montdidier. In that event the German operations would take the course of a converging movement to press the lines forward to the north and south of Amiens.

It is strongly possible, however, that any such effort will be frustrated in advance by the increasing pressure against the German center.

At numerous points along the tip of the German salient the German lines have been bent back and the Anglo-French advance is still in progress.

The French war office has made two successive announcements of gains between Demuin and the Somme which may be regarded as one of the vital points on the line.

There was heavy cannonading along the French front during the night, indicating that the Germans have got many of their guns forward to their new artillery positions. This would presage another burst of infantry fighting in that district soon.

The British war office announces the capture of 123 German prisoners in local fighting and the capture of many machine guns.

The German war office claims that 75,000 Allied prisoners have been taken during the first 12 days of the battle, but these figures are believed to be exaggerated.

The official announcement that American soldiers will be mixed with British and French units for actual participation in the fighting has been greeted joyfully in London and Paris. The fighting qualities of Uncle Sam's boys are fully appreciated in those capitals.

GERMAN STRENGTH IS EXHAUSTED

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, April 2.—Germany cannot sustain another serious offensive on the western front for weeks and possibly months. High army officers in the American, French and British armies now in Washington, expressed this opinion today after reading the latest reports from the Picardy battle front.

The German reserves have been exhausted they say, and General Foch maintains all of his reserves are not only intact but they have not yet been thrown into battle. That is the reason, these officers say, that General Ferdinand Foch so confidently declares, "Amiens will not fall. I am prepared to guarantee that."

The very latest information received here shows that the German reserve behind the lines has crumbled from 97 divisions to less than 30. The Germans again are digging in at many points in Picardy. They also are plainly apprehensive, the reports show, that the American-Anglo-French forces will themselves initiate a drive at some other point on the line rather than to attempt a counter offensive over the shell torn fields and woods of Picardy.

The next fortnight may see some very important moves on the part of General Foch. He has several possible movements any one of which would result in material advantage to the Entente. They now are replenishing their stores of big guns and munitions and so soon as that task is accomplished would be ready to strike and strike hard.

General Haig's forces which bore the brunt of the German offensive so gallantly are being refilled with replacement troops from England. Sending these forces is made easier for the British war control by the action of the United States in agreeing to send large numbers of Americans who have not had battle training to take the place of the effectives that are short across the channel.

The American units will train with the British and will have the advantage in England that our first troops to land in France had, of being instructed by war experts who learned the game under fire. This will be of great advantage to both sides.

The American first army is the one that has passed under the control of General Foch. It is commanded now by a major general who has won his laurels already and who is slated to be the first lieutenant general of the United States of the present war. Until his name has been sent to the senate, however, it is impossible to hint at his identity. The first army is a real material fighting force. It is well trained and is made up of regular units filled to war strength by men selected from the National Army and certain divisions of the National Guard.

BEACON MAN DIES IN LLOYD WRECK

Peter A. Donohue, 30 years, of Beacon, sustained injuries which caused his death, and George L. Green, 47 years, of Newburgh, was very severely injured Sunday morning in a freight wreck on the Central New England Railroad between Lloyd and Clintondale. W. F. Delaney, 25 years, of Beacon, and Homer Agnew of Millerton, were injured, but not seriously.

The accident occurred shortly after 4:30 o'clock when an engine and caboose were being taken to the Maybrook yard. The caboose jumped the track after breaking away from the engine, and then jumping the track, was overturned. What caused the accident is not known.

Delaney was the engineer on the train, Donohue and Green were riding in the cupola of the caboose and Agnew was on the rear end of the caboose. He jumped when the car left the rails. When the caboose turned over, Green and Donohue were buried in the wreckage. One of them had time to pull the bell rope, and warned the engineer of the mishap behind.

CALL TO COLORS SAVED MELBERT

The fact that Christian Melbert has been called to the colors and will leave with the next Ulster county contingent of drafted men on Friday was the reason why Charles Bucholtz of Greenkill avenue, withdrew the charge of burglary lodged against Melbert by him. Young Melbert was arrested charged with breaking into the Bucholtz residence and stealing a revolver. The revolver was recovered and turned over to Mr. Bucholtz. W. D. Brinnier, Jr., represented Melbert in court. The case was adjourned to this morning in police court at which time Mr. Bucholtz withdrew the charge.

STEAMER SUNK BY SUBMARINE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Boston, Mass., April 2.—The steamship Carlisle Castle, which sailed from an American port for England with a cargo for the British government, has been sunk by a German submarine, according to advices received here this afternoon.

No news has been obtained of the fate of her crew. She carried no passengers.

The Carlisle Castle was owned by the Union Castle Line but was under charter to the Cunard Company. She was a ship of 460 feet length, of 4,025 gross tons, and was built in Newcastle in 1913.

Wonderful Bandage Makers.

The Lend-a-Hand Society of the Dr. C. O. Sahler Sanitarium is doing remarkable Red Cross work, and that with great zeal and perseverance. Within forty days, the members of the society have made 515 triangular bandages, and those who have ever made triangular bandages will know what that means. This is a splendid showing, indeed.

BIGGER PARADE FOR OUR BOYS FRIDAY

Line of March Will be From Offices of Exemption Boards on Main Street and Everybody Will Have Chance to Take Part or See It.

Weather and street conditions have changed considrably since the last detail of Ulster county boys left for Camp Upton, and in honor of the boys who will leave from Divisions No. 1 and 2 on Friday morning for Camp Dix, the parade committee has decided to have a longer line of march and instead of escorting the boys from the armory to the depot, they will be escorted from the respective offices of the local exemption boards on Main street.

The change was decided on this morning after a conference between representatives of the organizations which are to take part in the parade, with some of the boys and their families and with citizens who desire to march in the citizen's division.

There will be two bands which will be provided for the paraders and plenty of music at the station when entrainment takes place. There are many people who have taken part in each of the parades already held who desire to show honor to the boys, and others who have not had an opportunity to do so. The fine weather will afford everyone who does not take part in the parade ample opportunity to line the streets through which the parade will pass, and to show their appreciation of the boys.

The line of march will be from Main street through Clinton avenue, Albany avenue, Broadway and Railroad avenue to the West Shore depot where the boys will entrain on the train which leaves at nine o'clock.

The change has necessitated a change in the orders of the grand marshal which as revised will be published later.

FARM LABOR AGENCY FOR COUNTY

The Freeman has been designated by the U. S. Department of Labor as Farm Labor Agency No. 42 and will co-operate in that capacity with the Ulster County Farm Bureau and whoever may be appointed by the State Food Commission. The part of The Freeman will be to give publicity to the Labor Agency, not to attempt to handle and place men on farms. This will be done at the office of the Farm Bureau. It is only on this condition that The Freeman consented to accept the appointment, which it considers unnecessary, although the Department of Labor seems to think otherwise and has insisted that the appointment be accepted. The Farm Bureau has always had all the publicity it asked for and would have it in this connection just the same, without thrusting any official appointment upon The Freeman.

STATEMENT OF MAYOR'S REASONS

Why He Vetoed the Ordinance Passed by the Common Council Relative to Proposed Increase of License Rates of Theaters, Auction Sales, Etc.

As told in The Freeman at the time, Mayor Canfield vetoed the ordinance passed by the commoun council relative to the proposed increase in license rates of places of amusement, peddlers, auction sales, etc.

The mayor's statement telling why he vetoed the ordinance is interesting. The statement follows:

The Honorable, the Common Council of the City of Kingston.

Gentlemen:—I herewith return to you for further consideration the ordinance passed by your Honorable Body at your meeting of March 5 last, which amended the city ordinance "to license and regulate hawking, peddling, night fakirs, auction sales and public entertainments."

The original ordinance provides that the license shall be issued by the chief of police and be countersigned by the mayor. The amendment passed provides for the issuing of a license, but fails to designate any city official as the person to issue such license and fails to clothe any city official with such power. I am of the opinion that the words "from the chief of police and countersigned by the mayor" were inadvertently left out and were probably intended to have been inserted, which should be done.

I am of the opinion that in some respects this amendment is an improvement upon the original provisions. I further believe that it does not completely accomplish the results intended and desired. As to motion picture houses, it provides for a license fee in proportion to the seating capacity of the place licensed. I believe that this is fair and just. As to vaudeville licenses and theater licenses it makes no distinction between the place with a capacity of one hundred and that of one thousand capacity. It also fixes a combined license fee the same for a small as for a large theater. In other words, the small theater with a seating capacity of three hundred pays $25 for a motion picture license, while the place with a seating capacity of one thousand pays $40; but the small place must pay $25 for a vaudeville license or an equal fee with the large place; and the small and the large place would both be taxed the same for a combined motion picture and vaudeville license, the fee to each being $50; and each would pay $150 for a combined theater, opera, motion picture and vaudeville license, and each would pay $125 for a theater or opera license. This would seem to me to be unfair and unequitable.

I would suggest also that the fee for a shooting gallery be $10 per year as the only person in the city who conducts the same has only been compelled to pay $5 per year in the past. The introducer stated it was his intention in revising such fee to lower it as an incentive to more rifle practice. It would appear to me, therefore, that it should not be raised from $5 to $20.

I further call you attention to the fact that the date set forth in section 2 thereof should be the date when the ordinance shall take effect and not February 6, 1918, or any past date.

I again call your attention to the provision of our charter which says "every ordinance, rule, regulation and bylaw shall be published in the two newspapers, designated for such purpose by the common council, before it takes effect." I believe the past custom in providing for such publication in the ordinance before it became effective should be followed. The question of the necessity thereof has been raised in the past and I do not believe that it is good or sound policy to run any risk as to the legality thereof because of any such omission.

I annex hereto a revised amendment which covers the points I have raised and which I submit for your consideration.

Your respectfully,

PALMER CANFIELD, JR.,

Mayor.

AMERICAN FLYERS IN ACTIVE SERVICE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

With The American Army In France, April 1.—American aviators are fighting on the Somme front under a son of a former governor of Minnesota. He is a major and commands the first American squadron, except the Lafayette Escadrille, to get into action in the big fight.

"The men of my command are making a magnificent showing," he declared today. "Americans should be proud of them."

The major has a magnificent physique and ordinarily ruddy cheeks but when he emerged from the battle for a brief rest he looked thin and sallow.

"You would look thin, too, if you had been through that hell," he said. "Shells are continuously breaking beneath and around you. Boche machine guns and other planes are after you every minute and every time you stop in a village to rest it is bombed and shelled."

The major referred to in Wales' despatch is undoubtedly Major Cushman A. Rice, one of the most picturesque characters in the American army. His career reads like a page from fiction. He has fought in South American revolutions, is a veteran of the Spanish-American War, was chief of scouts for General Lawton in the Philippines, and also took part in putting down the Boxer rebellion in China. It is reported that the late Richard Harding Davis wrote his "Captain Macklin" after hearing of Rice's exploits in a South American revolution. Rice has hunted big game in all parts of the world, was an amateur auto race driver and when in New York, where he lived most of the time, he was one of the figures along the Great White Way.

When America entered the war Rice immediately applied for a commission. He retired from the army after the Spanish-American war as a captain. Running into some delay in getting his commission Rice, wanting to get "Over there," enlisted as a private in the aviation corps. In a month he was a "top" sergeant and in a few more months he was made a major and given charge of a squadron.

BR'DWAY CROSSING INQUEST THURSDAY

Tragedy That Resulted in Death of Three Men Will Be Investigated by Coroner Kelly at That Time—Many Witnesses.

Coroner E. A. Kelly has decided to hold a coroner's inquest in the Broadway tragedy that resulted in the death of three men and the injuries to a number of others when a Broadway trolley car was hit by the New York newspaper train in March, at the court house Thursday morning at 10 oclock. A number of witnesses will be called to testify and the coroner will endeavor to place the blame for the accident at the inquest. The police force are busy today notifying the various witnesses to be present at the inquest when their testimony will be taken.

City Employes Strike.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Baltimore, Md., April 2.—Two thousand city employes, approximately two-thirds of the laborers employed by the city, are on strike today for a general advance in wages. They seek union labor support. Facing an almost complete tie-up of many departments, the administration today advertised for men and boys to drive teams and clean the streets.

BRIEF REVIEW OF THE BATTLE NEWS

Although fighting slackened along the British section of the Picardy battle front, it is believed to be only a lull before a fresh storm bursts forth.

For forty-eight hours the Germans have been massing troops north and south of the Somme river, evidently preparing for new blows against the Anglo-French positions east of the base city of Amiens.

The Germans have been hampered in getting heavy artillery to new positions by rain which turned the roads and fields to deep mud.

Savage assaults have been launched by the Germans against the French front in the Grivesnes sector, northwest of Montdidier, but the French lines withstood the pounding.

In the valley of the Luce rivulet the Germans were outfought and compelled to give ground.

"Appreciable progress has been made at various points between Demuim and the Somme river," the French war office announced.

Again the Germans have sustained tremendous new losses.

It is possible that the Germans plan a new double movement against Amiens by striking simultaneously west of Albert and west of Montdidier. In that event the German operations would take the course of a converging movement to press the lines forward to the north and south of Amiens.

It is strongly possible, however, that any such effort will be frustrated in advance by the increasing pressure against the German center.

At numerous points along the tip of the German salient the German lines have been bent back and the Anglo-French advance is still in progress.

The French war office has made two successive announcements of gains between Demuim and the Somme which may be regarded as one of the vital points on the line.

There was heavy cannonading along the French front during the night, indicating that the Germans have got many of their guns forward to their new artillery positions. This would presage another burst of infantry fighting in that district soon.

The British war office announces the capture of 123 German prisoners in local fighting and the capture of many machine guns.

The German war office claims that 75,000 Allied prisoners have been taken during the first 12 days of the battle, but these figures are believed to be exaggerated.

The official announcement that American soldiers will be mixed with British and French units for actual participation in the fighting has been greeted joyfully in London and Paris. The fighting qualities of Uncle Sam's boys are fully appreciated in those capitals.

GERMAN STRENGTH IS EXHAUSTED

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, April 2.—Germany cannot sustain another serious offensive on the western front for weeks and possibly months. High army officers in the American, French and British armies now in Washington, expressed this opinion today after reading the latest reports from the Picardy battle front.

The German reserves have been exhausted they say, and General Foch maintains all of his reserves are not only intact but they have not yet been thrown into battle. That is the reason, these officers say, that General Ferdinand Foch so confidently declares, "Amiens will not fall. I am prepared to guarantee that."

The very latest information received here shows that the German reserve behind the lines has crumbled from 97 divisions to less than 30. The Germans again are digging in at many points in Picardy. They also are plainly apprehensive, the reports show, that the American-Anglo-French forces will themselves initiate a drive at some other point on the line rather than to attempt a counter offensive over the shell torn fields and woods of Picardy.

The next fortnight may see some very important moves on the part of General Foch. He has several possible movements any one of which would result in material advantage to the Entente. They now are replenishing their stores of big guns and munitions and so soon as that task is accomplished would be ready to strike and strike hard.

General Haig's forces which bore the brunt of the German offensive so gallantly are being refilled with replacement troops from England. Sending these forces is made easier for the British war control by the action of the United States in agreeing to send large numbers of Americans who have not had battle training to take the place of the effectives that are short across the channel.

The American units will train with the British and will have the advantage in England that our first troops to land in France had, of being instructed by war experts who learned the game under fire. This will be of great advantage to both sides.

The American first army is the one that has passed under the control of General Foch. It is commanded now by a major general who has won his laurels already and who is slated to be the first lieutenant general of the United States of the present war. Until his name has been sent to the senate, however, it is impossible to hint at his identity. The first army is a real material fighting force. It is well trained and is made up of regular units filled to war strength by men selected from the National Army and certain divisions of the National Guard.

City Charter Bill Passed

Mayor Canfield received a telegram this afternoon from Assemblyman Joel Brink from Albany stating that the city charter bill passed both houses this morning.

BEACON MAN DIES IN LLOYD WRECK

Peter A. Donohue, 30 years, of Beacon, sustained injuries which caused his death, and George L. Green, 47 years, of Newburgh, was very severely injured Sunday morning in a freight wreck on the Central New England Railroad between Lloyd and Clintondale. W. F. Delaney, 25 years, of Beacon, and Homer Agnew of Millerton, were injured, but not seriously.

The accident occurred shortly after 9:30 o'clock when an engine and caboose were being taken to the Maybrook yard. The caboose jumped the track after breaking away from the engine, and then jumping the track, was overturned. What caused the accident is not known.

Delaney was the engineer on the train, Donohue and Green were riding in the cupola of the caboose and Agnew was on the rear end of the caboose. He jumped when the car left the rails. When the caboose turned over, Green and Donohue were buried in the wreckage. One of them had time to pull the bell rope, and warned the engineer of the mishap behind.

CALL TO COLORS SAVED MELBERT

The fact that Christian Melbert has been called to the colors and will leave with the next Ulster county contingent of drafted men on Friday was the reason why Charles Bucholtz of Greenkill avenue, withdrew the charge of burglary lodged against Melbert by him. Young Melbert was arrested charged with breaking into the Bucholtz residence and stealing a revolver. The revolver was recovered and turned over to Mr. Bucholtz. W. D. Brinnier, Jr., represented Melbert in court. The case was adjourned to this morning in police court at which time Mr. Bucholtz withdrew the charge.

STEAMER SUNK BY SUBMARINE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Boston, Mass., April 2.—The steamship Carlisle Castle, which sailed from an American port for England with a cargo for the British government, has been sunk by a German submarine, according to advices received here this afternoon.

No news has been obtained of the fate of her crew. She carried no passengers.

The Carlisle Castle was owned by the Union Castle Line but was under charter to the Cunard Company. She was a ship of 400 feet length, of 4,325 gross tons, and was built in Newcastle in 1913.

Wonderful Bandage Makers.

The Lend-a-Hand Society of the Dr. C. O. Sahler Sanitarium is doing remarkable Red Cross work, and that with great zeal and perseverance. Within forty days, the members of the society have made 515 triangular bandages, and those who have ever made triangular bandages will know what that means. This is a splendid showing, indeed.

CAME TO KINGSTON FOR LAND EXPERT

Important Rhinecliff Condemnation Closed—Which Was Brought By Property Owners After Railroad Shut Off Street to Ferry.

One of the most important cases growing out of the improvements which have been along the line of the New York Central railroad, where the railroad has taken certain lands at Rhinecliff station, in four tracking its system, has been closed.

The case resulted from the wiring of Shatzie street, at its junction with the railroad property near the station, thereby depriving several property owners in that vicinity access to the station and the river, a privilege that had been enjoyed by them long before the advent of the railroad.

The proceedings began in the autumn of 1915, when the railroad company denied that any damages had been done to the properties by reason of closing this thoroughfare.

The owners who claim to have been damaged are Mrs Annie G. Shuffle, owner of the well known Rhinecliff Hotel; the hotel owned by Robert S. Benson on the opposite corner; the business property of Mrs. Robert Muller adjoining the Benson property on the east and also the well known business properties of Scott and Ahern, in the immediate vicinity.

The case first came up before Judge Tompkins, at Poughkeepsie, when an important session was held which attracted considerable attention.

MacDonald DeWitt of 140 Nassau street, New York city, formerly of Kingston, had been retained for the plaintiffs and Morschauser, Mack and Mulvey and Robert Wilson for the defendant.

The session lasted until after midnight, and the testimony given by a number of the oldest residents from Rhinecliff, as to the early days of Schatzie street, when it was the only available approach from the eastern portion of the town to the Hudson river landing proved to be intensely interesting.

Expert Charles T. Coutant of Kingston, had been retained by the plaintiffs and gave testimony as to the value of the premises before and after the closing of the street

Judge Tompkins decided that the property owners had been damaged, and that a commission should be appointed to assess damages.

This was bitterly opposed by the defendants, but resulted in Mr. DeWitt being sustained by the courts, and William E. Aldrich, district attorney of Dutchess county, Frank B. Howard of Poughkeepsie, and Patrick H. Keaver of Millbrook, Dutchess county, were appointed as the commissioners to take testimony and assess said damages.

Many hearings have been held at Rhinecliff and at Poughkeepsie and every foot of ground has been hotly contested. Witnesses before the commission included Experts Charles T. Coutant of Kingston, Charles E. [illegible] of Poughkeepsie, and Clowell M. Colwell for the claimants Both sides have rested, and the matter now rests with the commission

Mr Coutant also as photographer, and his photographs became a part of the evidence.

CAME TO KINGSTON FOR LAND EXPERT

Important Rhinecliff Condemnation Closed—Which Was Brought By Property Owners After Railroad Shut Off Street to Ferry.

One of the most important cases growing out of the improvements which have been along the line of the New York Central railroad, where the railroad has taken certain lands at Rhinecliff station, in four tracking its system, has been closed.

The case resulted from the wiring of Shatzle street, at its junction with the railroad property near the station, thereby depriving several property owners in that vicinity access to the station and the river, a privilege that had been enjoyed by them long before the advent of the railroad.

The proceedings began in the autumn of 1915, when the railroad company denied that any damages had been done to the properties by reason of closing this thoroughfare.

The owners who claim to have been damaged are Mrs. Annie G. Shuffle, owner of the well known Rhinecliff Hotel; the hotel owned by Robert S. Benson on the opposite corner; the business property of Mrs. Robert Muller adjoining the Benson property on the east and also the well known business properties of Scott and Ahern, in the immediate vicinity.

The case first came up before Judge Tompkins, at Poughkeepsie, when an important session was held which attracted considerable attention.

MacDonald DeWitt of 140 Nassau street, New York city, formerly of Kingston, had been retained for the plaintiffs and Morschauser, Mack and Mulvey and Robert Wilson for the defendant.

The session lasted until after midnight, and the testimony given by a number of the oldest residents from Rhinecliff, as to the early days of Schatzle street, when it was the only available approach from the eastern portion of the town to the Hudson river landing proved to be intensely interesting.

Expert Charles T. Coutant of Kingston, had been retained by the plaintiffs and gave testimony as to the value of the premises before and after the closing of the street.

Judge Tompkins decided that the property owners had been damaged, and that a commission should be appointed to assess damages.

This was bitterly opposed by the defendants, but resulted in Mr. DeWitt being sustained by the courts, and William E. Aldrich, district attorney of Dutchess county, Frank B. Howard of Poughkeepsie, and Patrick H. Keaver of Millbrook, Dutchess county, were appointed as the commissioners to take testimony and assess said damages.

Many hearings have been held at Rhinecliff and at Poughkeepsie and every foot of ground has been hotly contested. Witnesses before the commission included Experts Charles T. Coutant of Kingston, Charles E. Rogers of Poughkeepsie, and Charles M. Colwell for the claimants. Both sides have rested, and the matter now rests with the commission.

Mr. Coutant also as photographer, and his photographs became a part of the evidence.

TREE SLAUGHTER BITTERLY OPPOSED

Citizens Resent Announced Proposal For Wholesale Removal of Trees And Mayor Canfield Explains Further His Theory.

Mayor Canfield's letter, instead of allaying public resentment, has inflamed it. It would take more than a page of The Freeman to print the expressions of indignation which have come to it regarding the action of the Board of Public Works as voiced by the mayor that it intends to cut down the trees which have been blazed by its so-called tree expert, and it is evident that if the board carries its intention into effect in accordance with the terms of the mayor's letter, that we shall come to as near an insurrection in this town as ever we have had.

Citizens of all classes have no intention of doing without shade trees in their generation in order that possibly succeeding generations may be rid of soft maples. Women whose trees have been blazed have not slept since the hacking was done. Property owners bitterly denounce the way in which slashes have been made in maples at a time when the sap is flowing and when the trees bleed profusely. The ablest lawyers of the city differ widely with the mayor in his view that the rights of the city authorities are paramount to those of the property owners, and many large taxpayers are insistent upon abolishing of the board of public works, and the restoration of the care of the city's streets to aldermen elected by and responsible to the people, while others favor a far more drastic and far reaching revision of the personnel of the city government.

The Freeman has endeavored to obtain a dispassionate statement of the law which seems to be as expressed by one of the city's experienced counsellors who says that the rights of abutting owners in shade trees are paramount to those of the city authorities unless the tree is so decayed as to be unsafe, or so planted as to obstruct public travel. Trees may be removed when the interests of public travel or public safety make it imperative to destroy them, but that does not authorize the authorities arbitrarily to remove them, the true doctrine being that municipal authorities may under the powers given to them, perform such acts as are appropriate or incident to the beneficial use of the street by the public, of which when not done in an improper and negligent manner, the adjoining fee holder cannot complain, but they cannot arbitrarily do what they may choose between the street boundary and the land of the adjoining fee holder, nor can they do so within the street boundaries to the prejudice of the abutting owner. The fee owner is absolutely entitled to maintain shade trees therefore unless some street use require their removal or they are judicially condemned for a public use, and paid for. He said that apparently the board of public works does not realize that it is a subordinate body to which the legislature has delegated specific powers. They are not endowed with legislative or administrative sovereignty, and if they act arbitrarily in the cutting of shade trees, they are trespassers individually and collectively, and individually can be compelled to pay whatever damage a property owner may sustain by the cutting of his trees, nor can the common council reimburse them for money they are obliged to pay because of the commission of an unlawful act, and another lawyer, to whom this opinion was shown, said that there might well be added to it the statement that the property owner would be justified in repelling by whatever force was necessary, the cutting of his trees, and another one stated that one of the offensive features of the situation was the spirit of technical legality running through the letter of the mayor.

Mayor Canfield's Statement.

The following letter has been received from Mayor Canfield:

Office of the Mayor
Kingston, N. Y., April 2, 1918.
Editor Freeman:

As some people apparently only read the headline which was prefixed to my letter published in your paper of Saturday last, they received an incorrect impression of the attitude of the board of public works and of myself in regard to our public shade trees.

As I stated in that letter, the board will be glad to co-operate with the property owner and to help him, if possible, to retain his trees, especially for the present.

Perhaps a good illustration is to say that many of our trees have cavities. When a tooth has a cavity the owner must let the tooth decay into uselessness, or have it out, or have it filled and treated. Sometimes, it is the judgment of the dentist that the tooth is beyond being susceptible to treatment.

The board will not cause any tree to be cut down which can be saved or preserved by trimming or treating if the property owner will attend to it. In the case where a tree can be preserved for a number of years, the property owner should plant another tree, if possible or let the board do it, to take the place of the tree which is on the way to its end.

In all other cases the board will take every precaution to avoid a mistake before having a tree taken down. I expect a tree expert from the state department to follow up the examination of the expert hired by the board and to check up his report.

A great many people will be surprised to finally discover that their tree, which shows to the non-treeman no indication of very great decay, is absolutely hollow. This condition existed as to one of my own trees. When the people learn of our complete plans to "treeify" the city, practically no one will be dissatisfied. However, as stated in my other letter the people will find the board entirely fair and reasonable in their attitude upon the question.

Respectfully,
PALMER CANFIELD, JR.

To Correct Selfishness.

If habits of selfishness and lack of self-control are already well established in a child, how shall we correct these habits? Adherence to a few strict rules will help to a certain extent. It can be explained to the child who is accustomed to showing temper whenever he feels like it that this will no longer be permitted. The child who has been in the habit of usurping all conversation at meals can be told that because he is getting older he must begin to learn to behave himself more as older people do, and he must therefore no longer break into the conversation of his elders. Most children, if the matter is kindly and tactfully explained to them, will accept some such rulings as to manners, but such means are merely expedients.—Mother's Magazine.

Daily Thought.

Chivalry never makes bargains. It never asks to be paid in advance or thanked. The chivalrous friend is never assured beforehand that his friendship will pay. The chivalrous patriot never knows in shedding his blood that his heroism will come back to him. In the spirit of chivalry there is a generous and infinite abandon of self.—Charles F. Dole.

Tripoli in History.

Early in the eighth century Tripoli was conquered by the Arabs. In 1510 it was taken by Spain and in 1551 it was conquered by Turkey and held a long time. While a Turkish possession Tripoli was a resort of pirates and at different times several European powers sent fleets to bombard its capital. The United States made war on it in 1801-05. In 1911 war broke out between Italy and Tripoli, regarding the rights of Italian citizens in Tripoli. An Italian army landed in Tripoli and in February, 1912, the Italian parliament passed a bill annexing Tripoli. In October, 1912, a treaty was signed by which Turkey ratified the annexation, and since then Tripoli has remained an Italian possession.

Tea's Growth in Popularity.

The cultivation of tea, started in Japan twelve hundred year ago, has become one of the principal industries of the nation today. More than one million households are engaged in its industry, with annual yield of one hundred million pounds. In 1915, 51,750,500 pounds, or 47.2 per cent of the total production of the country, including Formosa, were exported to the United States, amounting to nearly $8,000,000 in value.

Bells of Old New York.

Time was when New York was a city of bells. Chimes rang from the steeples of old Trinity, of St. Paul's, St. John's and St. Augustine's away downtown; of Grace church, further up Broadway; of St. Thomas', of the old Church of the Capuchins and of many more sanctuaries. Many of those early bells are now silent. Within recent years, chimes have been added to the equipment of St. Patrick's cathedral. Bells still ring at St. Andrew's Episcopal church, in Upper Fifth avenue. There is a trio of lovely contralto chimes in the Chapel of St. Agnes, at Amsterdam avenue and Ninety-third street.

Isinglass From Fish Sounds.

Isinglass is made from the sounds or swimming bladders of fish. One ton of hake, says the Popular Science Monthly, will yield from 40 to 50 pounds of sounds. These are dried, soaked, cut in pieces, rolled into sheets and cut into ribbons. The ribbons are dried and wound on wooden spools. One ounce of isinglass will clarify from 200 to 500 gallons of wine and one pound will clarify from 100 to 500 barrels of beer. It is used for making cement for mending glass and pottery and for adhesive plaster and enters into the manufacture of many textile and waterproof fabrics.

Mayor Canfield's Statement.

The following letter has been received from Mayor Canfield:

Office of the Mayor
Kingston, N. Y., April 2, 1918.
Editor Freeman:

As some people apparently only read the headline which was prefixed to my letter published in your paper of Saturday last, they received an incorrect impression of the attitude of the board of public works and of myself in regard to our public shade trees.

As I stated in that letter, the board will be glad to co-operate with the property owner and to help him, if possible, to retain his trees, especially for the present.

Perhaps a good illustration is to say that many of our trees have cavities. When a tooth has a cavity the owner must let the tooth decay into uselessness, or have it out, or have it filled and treated. Sometimes, it is the judgment of the dentist that the tooth is beyond being susceptible to treatment.

The board will not cause any tree to be cut down which can be saved or preserved by trimming or treating if the property owner will attend to it. In the case where a tree can be preserved for a number of years, the property owner should plant another tree, if possible or let the board do it, to take the place of the tree which is on the way to its end.

In all other cases the board will take every precaution to avoid a mistake before having a tree taken down. I expect a tree expert from the state department to follow up the examination of the expert hired by the board and to check up his report.

A great many people will be surprised to finally discover that their tree, which shows to the non-treeman no indication of very great decay, is absolutely hollow. This condition existed as to one of my own trees. When the people learn of our complete plans to "treeify" the city, pratically no one will be dissatisfied. However, as stated in my other letter the people will find the board entirely fair and reasonable in their attitude upon the question.

Respectfully,
PALMER CANFIELD, JR.

cure the best possible music from the dancers viewpoint as well as from the idea of the lover of music.

While there was no formal reception committee, Mrs. James Jenkins, chairman of the dance, made welcome the guests so far as possible, being assisted by Mrs. Edgar T. Shultis, vice-chairman. During the evening Mrs. Jenkins was presented with a beautiful bouquet, the gift of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Benedictine Sanitarium, and presented by little Roselyn Canfield.

The scene, when the dancing began was exceptionally pretty, there being so many young people, the costumes of the ladies being so attractive, while the picture was given a decidedly military touch by the presence of several men in uniform, the guests of the auxiliary for the evening.

The great success, financially, socially, of this war time dance, was entirely due to the indefatigble work of the chairman and the chairmen of the various committees together with their various assistants.

The committee in charge of the entire affair, wish at this time to thank the many merchants, so many of whom contributed generously toward the refreshment booth, where it was said that the most delicious of refreshments, especially those made according to the war recipes were served, or to other features of the dance, and to all others who by gifts of money or supplies or time helped it to achieve the success of last evening.

To the names of the patrons of the Charity Ball already printed in The Freeman, should be added the names of H. Lee Breithaupt of Phoenicia, and Judge N. Frank O'Reilly of this city.

Mother to Her Daughter.

"For so many years I struggled; in the long stormy winter nights I watched over you, cherished you. With my tears and prayers to God I obtained your life when death stood many a time at your bedside, waiting for mother to give you up. Never did I give you up. You were my pride, you were my light in the dark life of my struggle against poverty. And you gave up mother so easily! You left your home with no regret! You left your mother to her tears! Oh, where are you now? Are you happy, are you warm, are you fed? If I could only embrace you once more, feel you near my wounded heart! Other people have the pleasure to hear you talk, to hear you laugh, to hear you sing! Are you still singing, my little daughter, or was your voice forgotten under the heavy burden of the new life?"—Elizabeth Hasanovitz in the Atlantic.

To Correct Selfishness.

If habits of selfishness and lack of self-control are already well established in a child, how shall we correct these habits? Adherence to a few strict rules will help to a certain extent. It can be explained to the child who is accustomed to showing temper whenever he feels like it that this will no longer be permitted. The child who has been in the habit of usurping all conversation at meals can be told that because he is getting older he must begin to learn to behave himself more as older people do, and he must therefore no longer break into the conversation of his elders. Most children, if the matter is kindly and tactfully explained to them, will accept some such rulings as to manners, but such means are merely expediencies.—Mother's Magazine.

Daily Thought.

Chivalry never makes bargains. It never asks to be paid in advance or thanked. The chivalrous friend is never assured beforehand that his friendship will pay. The chivalrous patriot never knows in shedding his blood that his heroism will come back to him. In the spirit of chivalry there is a generous and infinite abandon of self.—Charles F. Dole.

Tripoli in History.

Early in the eighth century Tripoli was conquered by the Arabs. In 1510 it was taken by Spain and in 1551 it was conquered by Turkey and held a long time. While a Turkish possession Tripoli was a resort of pirates and at different times several European powers sent fleets to bombard its capital. The United States made war on it in 1801-05. In 1911 war broke out between Italy and Tripoli, regarding the rights of Italian citizens in Tripoli. An Italian army landed in Tripoli and in February, 1912, the Italian parliament passed a bill annexing Tripoli. In October, 1912, a treaty was signed by which Turkey ratified the annexation, and since then Tripoli has remained an Italian possession.

Tea's Growth in Popularity.

The cultivation of tea, started in Japan twelve hundred year ago, has become one of the principal industries of the nation today. More than one million households are engaged in its industry, with annual yield of one hundred million pounds. In 1915, 51,750,800 pounds, or 47.2 per cent of the total production of the country, including Formosa, were exported to the United States, amounting to nearly $8,000,000 in value.

Bells of Old New York.

Time was when New York was a city of bells. Chimes rang from the steeples of old Trinity, of St. Paul's, St. John's and St. Augustine's away downtown; of Grace church, further up Broadway; of St. Thomas', of the old Church of the Capuchins and of many more sanctuaries. Many of those early bells are now silent. Within recent years, chimes have been added to the equipment of St. Patrick's cathedral. Bells still ring at St. Andrew's Episcopal church, in Upper Fifth avenue. There is a trio of lovely contralto chimes in the Chapel of St. Agnes, at Amsterdam avenue and Ninety-third street.

Isinglass From Fish Sounds.

Isinglass is made from the sounds or swimming bladders of fish. One ton of hake, says the Popular Science Monthly, will yield from 40 to 50 pounds of sounds. These are dried, soaked, cut in pieces, rolled into sheets and cut into ribbons. The ribbons are dried and wound on wooden spools. One ounce of isinglass will clarify from 200 to 500 gallons of wine and one pound will clarify from 100 to 500 barrels of beer. It is used for making cement for mending glass and pottery and for adhesive plaster and enters into the manufacture of many textiles and waterproof fabrics.

KINGSTON, N. Y., APRIL 2, 1918.

Not long ago a Kingston organization of women decided it was necessary to admonish members and the public generally to exercise great care in discussing war matters in public places Within a few days the publishers of The Jewelers' Circular have found it necessary to issue a warning against a concerted effort on the part of a few women in the United States, acting in their own names and in behalf of a society, to obtain publicity for a story to the effect that the Government may commandeer platinum jewelry or ask the women of the country to give up platinum jewelry for patriotic purposes. The stories which come to the newspapers emanate from Washington, Boston and other centers from what appears to be authentic sources of information There is no truth in the stories. Government officials have not made any such request nor do circumstances make it appaient that the Government will do either of the things stated. A large number of patriotic women who are anxious and willing to assist in every way they can have been misled into sending their platinum jewelry to the Government but the Government does not want it and has no machinery to accept it This propaganda is on the same line as much other propaganda which fills the conversation of most people regarding the war. It is in line with stories which were told at a public gathering in Kingston shortly before the present German drive began, to the effect that a well known New York regiment had been completely annihilated, and it is of the same make as stories regarding big gains or losses in the present drive. The persistence of such stories naturally raises the question whether the Busy Street Liar is simply working overtime or whether German propagandists are at work here.

There should be prompt compliance by Congress with General Pershing's request that American troops be authorized to wear decorations bestowed on them by the Allied Governmets, and to give him similar powers to reward Allied heroes. The days when the prohibition which General Pershing asks to have removed was necessary are long past. In the early days of the United States, before the new Government had become stable when attempts like that of Aaron Burr to establish a monarchy here were still possible by reason of the general inability to judge the success of the new democracy, it was very desirable not only to remove temptation from soldiers who might be inclined to follow adventurers but also to remove all traces of whatever conflicted with the tenets of plain democracy Services of our soldiers are recognized and rewarded from time to time by Congressional decorations, and municipalities frequently bestow honors on men who have performed valorous acts in military and civil service The soldier in the field endures hardships unknown to the stay-at-homes A decoration, a medal, means much to him not because of its intrinsic value, not because he likes to decorate himself, but because it distinguishes him as having done something more than is ordinarily expected of [illegible] Scientists, craftsmen, workers in every business and profession strive to accomplish something above the ordinary for the satisfaction of mere accomplishment The soldier does the same thing The medal or decoration bestowed is the only acknowledgement he receives, unless there is opportunity for promotion Grateful nations are willing to show their thanks in this simple way. False ideas of democracy should not stand in the way of their acceptance

SOLDIER AND SOCIAL GLASS

It is a punishable crime to sell intoxicating beverages to men in uniform or by any means whatsoever to supply them with intoxicants in their camps or in public places, but it is not a punishable crime to offer a "social glass" to a soldier guest in a private home The latter practice has been denounced as contrary to law, although the law does not forbid it and the misconception has now been cleared away by the following announcement of Attorney-General Gregory.

Alcoholic liquor, including beer, ale and wine, either alone or with any other article, shall not, directly or indirectly, be sold, bartered, given, served or knowingly delivered to any officer or member of the military forces, except when administered for medical purposes by or under the direction of a regularly licensed physician or army surgeon; providing that this regulation shall not apply to the giving or serving of such liquor in a private home to members of the family or bona fide guests.

The Department of Justice does not find it necessary to follow the soldier into his own home or when he is a guest in the home of a friend, and there are two obvious reasons for this. No soldier is likely to drink to excess under such circumstances, and not to permit such a passing of the social glass would limit the freedom of the citizen's home to an undesirable extent not demanded by the public need of war time

She Knew What to Take.

Five year old Mary, who is always anxious to be in everything that goes on, lives in a small town where the long suffering minister still endures donation parties to make up his back salary. Just before the last one she begged eagerly:

"Can't I take something too, muvver?"

"No if your father and I take something that will be plenty"

But the child could not bear to give up the idea, so she ransacked the whole house for something suitable. Finally she appeared before her mother with a worn and faded dress of her own.

"Please, muvver, can't I take this? See, it's not a speck of good for anything," she urged.—The Christian Herald.

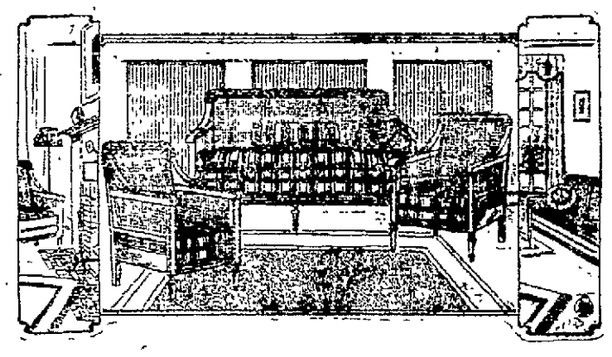
And others that bring permanent beauty into the home at a fraction of the cost of the originals.

Living Room Problems



Appropriateness is a most important consideration, for no furniture, however beautiful in itself, can be permanently satisfactory if inappropriate to its purpose or surroundings. Overstuffed furniture, for example, is the top notch of luxurious elegance for the winter home, but scarcely suitable for the summer one. If one cannot afford two homes, then furniture appropriate for both seasons should be employed.

For example—Cane with Mahogany. This beautiful furniture combines exquisite distinction with lightness, airiness, and a charm that facinates—winter or summer. There are many of these suites here, superbly made in every respect, and richly upholstered in damask or velour, with separate pillows. One is illustrated.

KINGSTON, N. Y., APRIL 2, 1918.

Not long ago a Kingston organization of women decided it was necessary to admonish members and the public generally to exercise great care in discussing war matters in public places. Within a few days the publishers of The Jewelers' Circular have found it necessary to issue a warning against a concerted effort on the part of a few women in the United States, acting in their own names and in behalf of a society, to obtain publicity for a story to the effect that the Government may commandeer platinum jewelry or ask the women of the country to give up platinum jewelry for patriotic purposes. The stories which come to the newspapers emanate from Washington, Boston and other centers from what appears to be authentic sources of information. There is no truth in the stories. Government officials have not made any such request nor do circumstances make it apparent that the Government will do either of the things stated. A large number of patriotic women who are anxious and willing to assist in every way they can have been misled into sending their platinum jewelry to the Government but the Government does not want it and has no machinery to accept it. This propaganda is on the same line as much other propaganda which fills the conversation of most people regarding the war. It is in line with stories which were told at a public gathering in Kingston shortly before the present German drive began, to the effect that a well known New York regiment had been completely annihilated, and it is of the same make as stories regarding big gains or losses in the present drive. The persistence of such stories naturally raises the question whether the Busy Street Liar is simply working overtime or whether German propagandists are at work here.

There should be prompt compliance by Congress with General Pershing's request that American troops be authorized to wear decorations bestowed on them by the Allied Governmets, and to give him similar powers to reward Allied heroes. The days when the prohibition which General Pershing asks to have removed was necessary are long past. In the early days of the United States, before the new Government had become stable, when attempts like that of Aaron Burr to establish a monarchy here were still possible by reason of the general inability to judge the success of the new democracy, it was very desirable not only to remove temptation from soldiers who might be inclined to follow adventurers but also to remove all traces of whatever conflicted with the tenets of plain democracy. Services of our soldiers are recognized and rewarded from time to time by Congressional decorations, and municipalities frequently bestow honors on men who have performed valorous acts in military and civil service. The soldier in the field endures hardships unknown to the stay-at-homes. A decoration, a medal, means much to him not because of its intrinsic value, not because he likes to decorate himself, but because it distinguishes him as having done something more than is ordinarily expected of a man. Scientists, craftsmen, workers in every business and profession strive to accomplish something above the ordinary for the satisfaction of mere accomplishment. The soldier does the same thing. The medal or decoration bestowed is the only acknowledgment he receives, unless there is opportunity for promotion. Grateful nations are willing to show their thanks in this simple way. False ideas of democracy should not stand in the way of their acceptance.

SOLDIER AND SOCIAL GLASS.

It is a punishable crime to sell intoxicating beverages to men in uniform or by any means whatsoever to supply them with intoxicants in their camps or in public places, but it is not a punishable crime to offer a "social glass" to a soldier guest in a private home. The latter practice has been denounced as contrary to law, although the law does not forbid it, and the misconception has now been cleared away by the following announcement of Attorney-General Gregory:

Alcoholic liquor, including beer, ale and wine, either alone or with any other article, shall not, directly or indirectly, be sold, bartered, given, served or knowingly delivered to any officer or member of the military forces, except when administered for medical purposes by or under the direction of a regularly licensed physician or army surgeon; providing that this regulation shall not apply to the giving or serving of such liquor in a private home to members of the family or bona fide guests.

The Department of Justice does not find it necessary to follow the soldier into his own home or when he is a guest in the home of a friend, and there are two obvious reasons for this. No soldier is likely to drink to excess under such circumstances, and not to permit such a passing of the social glass would limit the freedom of the citizen's home to an undesirable extent not demanded by the public need of war time.

LITTLE LAUGHS.

"De trouble about fault-findin'," said Uncle Eben, "is dat a man is liable to regard it as an accomplishment instid of a habit."—Washington Star.

Hokus—"So he's in the diplomatic service, eh? Well, he is eminently fitted for it." Pokus—"How so?" "He used to be stage manager of an amateur dramatic club."—Life.

"Would you call Mrs. Gowitt a good conversationalist?" "Yes and no. She makes you think of a lot of things to say, but she talks so incessantly you don't get a chance to say them."—Boston Transcript.

"Flabby always boasted that when he married he would never live with his wife's people, and that is exactly what he is doing." "Not exactly; he isn't living with them—he is living on them."—Baltimore American.

"Lend me $10 until I see you again." "I'd rather not put it just that way." "What do you mean?" "Suppose I lend you $10 until I see you again. In the circumstances my vision is apt to be much keener than yours."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

She Knew What to Take.

Five year old Mary, who is always anxious to be in everything that goes on, lives in a small town where the long suffering minister still endures donation parties to make up his back salary. Just before the last one she begged eagerly:

"Can't I take something too, muvver?"

"No, if your father and I take something that will be plenty."

But the child could not bear to give up the idea, so she ransacked the whole house for something suitable. Finally she appeared before her mother with a worn and faded dress of her own.

"Please, muvver, can't I take this? See, it's not a speck of good for anything," she urged.—The Christian Herald.

A Long Dry Spell.

Governor Livingston Beeckman of Rhode Island said in Providence, apropos of the gigantic stride that the temperance movement is taking:

"The whole country now seems to look at excess as the young wife did.

"'Jim, dear,' said a young wife, 'I do wish you'd stop drinking. Every time you go to one of those banquets of yours you get up the next morning pale and silent, you eat nothing, you just gulp down 10 or 15 glasses of water. Do stop drinking, won't you? I know it can't be good for you, dear.'

"'All great men have been drinking men,' said Jim. 'Look at Poe, at Charles Lamb, look at Burns, look at—'

"'Well, Jim,' said the young wife, 'you just swear off till you become a great man, too, and I'll be satisfied.'"—Washington Star.

Wretched Brutes.

A Frenchman was waiting at a railroad station in Ireland when a couple of natives sat down beside him. Said one:

"Sure, Pat, it's down to Kilmary I've been, and I'm on me way back to Kilpatrick."

"Ye don't say so," said the other. "It's meself that's just after being down to Kilkenney, and I stop here a bit before I go to Kilmore."

"What assassins!" exclaimed the Frenchman. "Would that I were safely back in France."—Exchange.

Literary Emolument.

"I've just sold a story," said the young author, proudly.

"How much did you get for it?" asked the elderly cynic.

"A check for $25."

"And how long did you work on it?"

"About six weeks."

"Young man, have you ever stopped to consider that a fairly good stenographer who works six weeks gets paid about $150?"—Birmingham Age-Herald.

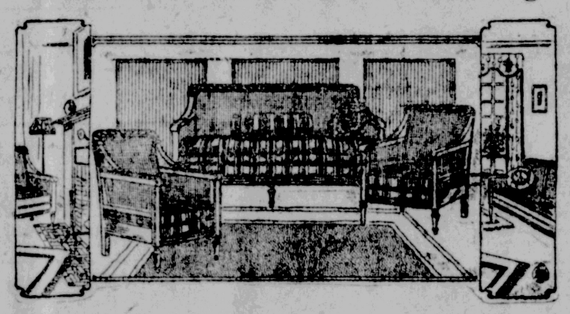
Hints to be Considered in Furnishing



Appropriateness is a most important consideration, for no furniture, however beautiful in itself, can be permanently satisfactory if inappropriate to its purpose or surroundings. Overstuffed furniture, for example, is the top notch of luxurious elegance for the winter home, but scarcely suitable for the summer one. If one cannot afford two homes, then furniture appropriate for both seasons should be employed.

For example—Cane with Mahogany. This beautiful furniture combines exquisite distinction with lightness, airiness, and a charm that facinates—winter or summer. There are many of these suites here, superbly made in every respect, and richly upholstered in damask or velour, with separate pillows. One is illustrated.

AUTO RAN INTO A WAGON MONDAY

Monday evening about 8:20 o'clock an auto of the Baylor laundry on Wilbur avenue driven by Charles DeGraff, ran into a horse and wagon owned and driven by W. C. Brodhead, of No. 291 Hasbrouck avenue. Mr. Brodhead was thrown from the wagon, but apparently escaped uninjured except for a shaking up. The accident occurred on Henry street, near Sterling street.

DID NOT WAIT FOR TREE EXPERT

Deciding not to wait for the appearance on the scene of Tree Expert Edwin Burhans of the board of public works, and late of Bull Moose fame, the large tree standing in front of the Old Homestead on Abeel street fell with a crash at 5:30 o'clock this morning when there was not a breath of wind stirring. Fortunately for all concerned the tree had taken an appropriate time to fall for traffic was exceedingly light at that hour in the morning. The tree carried with it a number of street wires in its fall earthward. This tree has been standing a number of years, and when it fell it was seen that the core of the tree was rotten.

COHEN MURDER LIKE THAT OF ROSENTHAL

Outcome of Plot by Gamblers to Head Off Police Inquiry—Had $10,000 Fund to Help Them.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, April 2.—Revelation of the details of a $10,000 plan by gamblers of New York to stop police inquiry into their trade was promised today with the arrest of Morris Rothenberg, a bartender, charged with homicide, following the murder of Harry Cohen, informer, known as "Harry the Yott."

Rothenberg was identified by Joseph Edney, elevator boy of Cohen's apartment building, as the man who left Cohen's apartment with him and shot him to death as he telephoned from a booth in the building.

"We have the murdered," was the formal statement early today of James E. Smith, assistant district attorney with whom Cohen had made an appointment before his death yesterday to reveal all he knew of the gambling ring.

"A fund of $10,000 was raised by the gamblers to stop our John Doe inquiry and the killing was one result," Smith said. "Rothenberg made many conflicting statements which we are checking up today."

Rothenberg, the police announced, admitted he had been out of work, without any plausible means of livelihood for four months, and that the gambler and burglar he is charged with killing had financed him to a considerable extent during the period.

He admitted further that he spent much of Sunday with "Harry the Yott" in a lower Sixth avenue gambling den; that he stayed there all night with him and with another man, a foreigner, whom he claimed not to know, had walked with Cohen to his home. At the apartment, he said, the three parted. Awakening Monday afternoon and learning of the murder, Rothenberg said he decided he would be wanted as a witness. He claimed to know nothing of Cohen's movements after 6 o'clock Monday morning. The gambler was killed an hour later.

Edney, the elevator operator, picked Rothenberg out of sixteen men when the police lined them up for identification.

"You're the man, but you have on a different suit. You had a green suit on then," he said.

Rothenberg admitted he had worn a green suit Sunday, changing to gray yesterday, but in the face of Edney's positive statement denied knowledge of the shooting.

Menace of Croup.

Croup is a spasm of the larynx which comes on very suddenly. Often in the middle of the night the baby will awaken with a harsh cough, and rough and difficult breathing. Sometimes the face may become blue. The child should be made to vomit in order to relax the spasm. This is best brought about by giving a teaspoonful dose of ipecac. The inhalation of steam will help to shorten the attack. A croup-kettle is the best means of using the steam. A tent made of blankets will aid in concentrating the steam. It is better to use a teaspoonful of compound tincture of benzoin to each pint of water used in the croup-kettle than steam alone. Mustard plasters, one part mustard to three parts flour, as well as warm compresses over the chest, are of value. For a child who has persistent attacks of croup it is best to ascertain whether enlarged tonsils and adenoids are not a factor. If they are present have them removed.—From the Delineator.

HUN WOMEN TORTURE VICTIMS

Repatriated English War Prisoners Tell of Revolting Red Cross Outrages.

FOOD AND WATER DENIED.

Soldiers Herded Into Filthy Cattle Cars and Cursed and Spat Upon by Women and Children.

The English government has just issued a report on the treatment of British prisoners of war by Germany, which is made up of the depositions of 48 officers and 77 noncommissioned officers and men, most of whom fell wounded into the hands of the enemy. These men were taken prisoners at the beginning of the war and have only recently been repatriated to England. Let them tell their own story, then think over it and see if it is not the duty of every American to put his money into Liberty Bonds and help America to put an end for all time to the military power of a people who could be guilty of such outrages.

Lieutenant Colonel Neish says:

"At Cologne I saw a female with a Red Cross badge on her after serving our escort of German soldiers with coffee deliberately pour the remaining contents of the can on the ground when requested to allow us to have some. During the journey to Sennelager—some 48 hours—we were given one meal—soup."

Maj. A. S. Peebles declares:

"At one station we asked two Red Cross ladies for a glass of water, saying it was for a wounded officer. They burst out laughing and said, 'Nothing for you English.'"

Captain Beman testifies:

"The German Red Cross gave no food to prisoners, wounded or otherwise. At times it is shown to them and then withdrawn, with kindly remarks that it is not for swine."

Captain Hargreaves asserts:

"At Liege I tried personally to get the German Red Cross officials to give our wounded men water. They refused. I saw some Red Cross nurses actually bring water in cans up to our men, show it to them and then pour it on the platform. This also happened to me personally. At Aix-la-Chapelle the excitement and anger of the crowd were indescribable. There was an elaborate Red Cross dressing station here. All water and food was rigorously refused us. The German wounded in the train had their wounds dressed. This was refused us."

Major Meiklejohn deposes:

"German Red Cross women refused us any food, calling us insulting names, and spat toward us, telling us they would give nothing to the English 'schweinhunde,' although we told them some of us were very ill and all wounded. I myself saw one and other officers saw several German women dressed as nurses and ladies and wearing the Red Cross deliberately empty bowls of soup on the platform before us, saying something about giving nothing to 'English swine.' Other officers, among whom, I understand, was Captain Pelham-Burn, Gordon Highlanders, saw Red Cross women spit in the soup before offering it to them.

"Throughout this journey the conduct of the German women, especially those dressed as Red Cross nurses, was revolting and barbarous beyond words, and as a result of the continuous brutality of Red Cross women and officials many prisoners of war besides myself have still a repugnance to seeing a Red Cross armlet."

In the whole record there is only one case given where the German Red Cross women showed any signs of human sympathy. Captain H. G. Gilliland says that at Coblenz "the sliding doors of the truck in which the wounded had traveled for two days were pulled open and two or three German women of the Red Cross came up and asked when we had had food last. When they found we had had none they went off and got us some sausage sandwiches, but before they could give them to us they were prevented by German officers, who said, 'These are English prisoners, and they are to have nothing.'"

The ambulance trains, which under the Geneva Convention should have been employed impartially for all wounded, were never used for the British. They were flung into cattle cars. Major Vandaleur, with 51 other wounded, was put into a closed car from which horses had just been removed. He avers:

"So tight were we packed that there was only room for some of us to sit on the floor. This floor was covered fully three inches deep in fresh manure, and the stench was almost asphyxiating."

Wherever British prisoners were taken they were spat at or upon by German men, women and children.

"They seemed," says Captain H. G. W. Irwin, "to specialize in expectoration."

The German school children howled "hate chorus." Sometimes the wounded were threatened with knives and revolvers. German officers allowed their men to strike a convoy of prisoners with sabers and bayonets and to kick their crutches from under the arms of cripples.

GOAL FOR 1918 CANNERS—1,500,000,000 QUARTS!

GET READY FOR BIG FALL PACK

Specialists Advise Ordering Equipment Early and See That Cans Are Ready.

Putting Up Food at Home Saves Transportation Later—Last Year's Pack Estimated at 850,000,000 —Goal Set for 1918.

One billion five hundred million quarts of home-canned produce in 1918!

A goal has been set for the 1918 home canners. The stupendous size of it might make it appear impossible of attainment were it not for the fact that the American family's ability to can, in a patriotic situation, has been demonstrated. The great canning effort for the year 1917 has been estimated at 850,000,000 packs by officials of the United States department of agriculture. But there are still thousands of unfilled jars in every township of the United States, the specialists say, in setting the new goal and advising early preparations for the 1918 campaign. If a slogan is needed, "Fill every jar in every home, keep every jar busy throughout the year," is suggested.

Pack for Last Year.

The method of arriving at the estimated countrywide pack for last year is interesting. Eight of the principal concerns in the United States manufacturing rubber jar rings reported a production for use in home canning of 836,761,248 rubber rings. Retailers and jobbers, it is understood, carried over from the year 1916 a large supply of rubber jar rings. Taking into account the special caps that were sold and the use of jar rings a second time, the officials believe it is safe to estimate the number of packs made in homes last year at 850,000,000.

Quart Jar for Canning.

Canning in most homes is done in quart jars. It is reasonable to assume that the two-quart packs may be used to offset the pint packs, specialists say, and that therefore the total pack estimated might safely be expressed in quarts. Placing a general average value of 20 cents a quart upon this product, the estimated value of hermetically sealed food canned in homes is $170,000,000. In most cases this food was produced on the farm or in the backyard garden, was canned in the family kitchen, stored in the pantry, and is being consumed in the home. The transportation facilities of the country were not taxed in the production of this food and in most cases it was produced on soil that otherwise would have been idle, with labor that would have been unable to find useful employment.

Careful About Salt.

The bureau of chemistry, united States department of agriculture, warns consumers against buying table salt from peddlers or other persons whose reliability is not established. Salt recently offered by a peddler in Washington was found to contain serious amounts of arsenic. The opinion is expressed that the salt possibly was recovered from a refrigerating plant or may have been the sweepings from a warehouse. Other low-grade or by-product salt contains sufficient barium chloride to be poisonous and dangerous in food. Such salt, under the food and drugs act, must be labeled or invoiced "Not for food purposes." Irresponsible dealers, however, may offer it for sale for human consumption. Such sale is, of course, in violation of state or federal laws, and renders the leader, if caught, liable to prosecution. The attention of the public is called to the need of great care in the purchase of low-grade food products offered at bargain prices.

FEDERAL SERVICE SHOWS MORE SUGAR CONSUMED

Returns from the first war emergency food survey made by the U. S. department of agriculture indicates that the amount of sugar consumed in 1917 was about 88.3 pounds per capita whereas the average annual consumption for the five-year period ending in 1916 was 84.7 pounds per capita. The evident increase in consumption, says the department, is due in part to the increased manufacture for export of commodities like condensed milk and to an increase in population coupled with an increased consumption by individuals and to an increase in consumers' stocks.

Prepare for Home Canning.

Collect all used jars.

Examine each carefully.

Discard all defective containers and damaged tops.

Clean all useable jars and store with tops in place.

Order any additional jars needed and lay in a supply of new rubber rings.

Make sure that the clean wash boiler or other large vessel that you will use for your hot-water bath are free from leaks. Examine and test pressure or other special canning apparatus if you have it.

If you use a wash boiler or large pail provide a false bottom of slats or bent wire. Strong wire trays with long upright handles make good false bottoms and enable the housewife to lift out groups of hot jars from the water bath.

SAVE LITTLE SUGAR TODAY.

Substitute Other Sweets.

Cook cereals with dates or raisins and serve without sugar. Cook dried fruits without sugar. Sweeten fruits with honey or maple or corn sirup. Make puddings, cakes and other pastry with part corn sirup, molasses, or honey instead of all sugar. For a cupful of sugar in a cake recipe substitute a cupful of sirup or honey and for each cupful so used lessen the amount of liquor in the recipe by one-quarter cupful.

SHOULD RETAIN BEST FOWLS

Patriotic Farmers Who Desire to Do Their Bit Will Find It Wise to Keep Best Layers.

Among farmers generally it is the common practice to sell hens over a year old for poultry when they stop laying in the fall. Under the usual conditions this is good policy, for as a rule only about half the flock lay well enough the second year to be profitable, and the farmer who has pullets enough to replace all his old hens sees no advantage in keeping any of them over.

This year, however, patriotic farmers who desire to do their part to increase the poultry and egg supplies will find it desirable to retain a considerable proportion of the yearling hens, making such addition to their poultry-house equipment as may be necessary to properly accommodate both pullets and hens. Overcrowding must be avoided, as neither pullets nor hens will do their best.

BOILED OATS FOR CHICKENS

Favorable Results Obtained by Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture—Feed Warm.

Poultry experts in the Pennsylvania department of agriculture report favorable results from feeding boiled oats, and state they are the cheapest poultry food now obtainable. Boiled oats have largely, too, superseded the sprouted oats so much exploited a few years ago, as they are better, safer and less fussy.

To prepare, soak good, heavy oats 12 hours or more (in hot weather or a warm room a fresh lot should be soaked daily), dissolve one tablespoonful of salt in each bucket of water used for this, boil two or three hours and so gauge the amount of water used for soaking that at the finish the water is boiled away. Feed warm but not hot. White Leghorn pullets can have these boiled oats twice daily, say at 10 a. m. and 4 p. m., and all they will eat up clean. For old hens or heavyweight pullets, one feed a day is enough and not too much at that, lest they become too fat on this much-liked feed.

CAREFUL ESTIMATE OF FEED

If Bran and Shorts Are Used Freely in Dry Mash They Will Take Place of Grains.

One is compelled these days to make pretty careful estimates in regard to kinds of feed for chickens. It seems that bran and shorts are cheap as anything on the market. If these are used freely in a dry mash with cornmeal, making the shorts the predominant part, the mixture will largely take the place of cracked grains. It can be fed in self-feeders. It is a good mixture for growing chicks whether or not cracked grains are used, and can profitably be kept before them all the time.

KEEP ONLY THE BEST FOWLS

Owing to High Price of Feed Poultryman Should Cull Out and Dispose of All Runts.

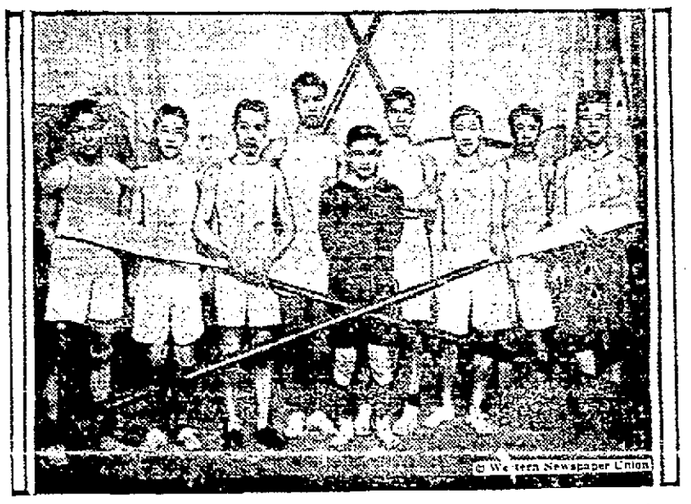
Now that poultry feeds, like all other feeds, are high in price, the poultry keeper should be more careful than ever to cull out and dispose of all runts, weak specimens and those which are in any way deformed. While these are allowed in the flock, they are consuming food and using coop and house room which could be more profitably devoted to strong, more perfect stock.

KEEPING MALES IN SAME PEN

Not Wise Plan to Permit Two Roosters With Hens—Use Them on Alternate Days.

It is not best to allow two males in the same pen together. If it becomes necessary to keep more than one in the same pen, only one should be allowed with the hens the same day. It is a good plan to let one run with the hens and the other one the next day. The male should be kept in a pen by himself when he is not with the hens.

RICE IS COACHING REAL CHINESE OARSMEN AT COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY



Will you read that a Chinese eight-oared shell poked its nose across the line at Poughkeepsie ahead of Cornell, or Syracuse, or Pennsylvania?

Don't laugh. It's a possibility.

At Columbia university Jim Rice, the veteran coach of the Blue and White, is not devoting all his time to the Caucasians in training. Far from that he is inclined to give a little bit more of his time to his Chinese oarsmen who are making the first Chinese crew in the history of American aquatics.

"These boys are light, compared to an American crew, but they have all the endurance of men bigger than they are," is Coach Rice's explanation. "Then, too, that coxswain, little Lee, knows his business. I don't always understand his shouts to his oarsmen, but they do, and they can sure hit up the pace when he gets going.

"To tell the truth, I was inclined to be skeptical when they came to me and wanted to make a crew. But they were very much in earnest, and so I took them in charge. Now I am becoming enthusiastic over them. They obey all orders like true soldiers and are picking up the finer points of rowing with remarkable speed. They'll make good, mark me, or I never saw a crew in my life."

Little Lee, the coxswain, is one of Columbia's leading wrestlers. Captain Kwong is a strong, well-built athlete and excels in the gymnasium. Every man in the bunch is a perfect specimen of Chinese manhood, and not one is a bit backward about entering into a regatta against American crews.

The Chinese crew at Columbia may not row at Poughkeepsie—that hasn't been decided yet—but they will undoubtedly compete in several regattas around New York and in New England. They want to test their mettle.

GRIFFITH FOR DAYLIGHT LAW

If Washingtonians Go to Business Earlier They Will Have More Time at Ball Park.

Clark Griffith, manager of the Washingtons, is a strong advocate of the proposed daylight-saving law which congress may adopt. Griff argues that if Washingtonians go to business earlier in the day they will have more time to spend at the Washington ball park. Other baseball magnates and managers are said to favor this legislation, which in their opinion would increase the daily attendance figures to a marked degree. Games could be started at four o'clock, with plenty of time to complete them before sunset.

Capt. Walter M. Marks, Sir Thomas' representative, arrived in an American port recently with instructions to inspect the cup challenger, which has been laid up in the Erie basin since the postponement of the races of 1914. Captain Marks is to report to the owner as to her condition.

Fortunately for all concerned the tree had taken an appropriate time to fall for traffic was exceedingly light at that hour in the morning. The tree carried with it a number of street wires in its fall earthward. This tree has been standing a number of years, and when it fell it was seen that the core of the tree was rotten.

COHEN MURDER LIKE THAT OF ROSENTHAL

Outcome of Plot by Gamblers to Head Off Police Inquiry—Had $10,000 Fund to Help Them.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, April 2.—Revelation of the details of a $10,000 plan by gamblers of New York to stop police inquiry into their trade was promised today with the arrest of Morris Rothenberg, a bartender, charged with homicide, following the murder of Harry Cohen, informer, known as "Harry the Yott."

Rothenberg was identified by Joseph Edney, elevator boy of Cohen's apartment building, as the man who left Cohen's apartment with him and shot him to death as he telephoned from a booth in the building.

"We have the murdered," was the formal statement early today of James E. Smith, assistant district attorney with whom Cohen had made an appointment before his death yesterday to reveal all he knew of the gambling ring.

"A fund of $10,000 was raised by the gamblers to stop our John Doe inquiry and the killing was one result," Smith said. "Rothenberg made many conflicting statements which we are checking up today."

Rothenberg, the police announced, admitted he had been out of work, without any plausible means of livelihood for four months, and that the gambler and burglar he is charged with killing had financed him to a considerable extent during the period.

He admitted further that he spent much of Sunday with "Harry the Yott" in a lower Sixth avenue gambling den; that he stayed there all night with him and with another man, a foreigner, whom he claimed not to know, had walked with Cohen to his home. At the apartment, he said, the three parted. Awakening Monday afternoon and learning of the murder, Rothenberg said he decided he would be wanted as a witness. He claimed to know nothing of Cohen's movements after 6 o'clock Monday morning. The gambler was killer an hour later.

Edney, the elevator operator, picked Rothenberg out of sixteen men when the police lined them up for identification.

"You're the man, but you have on a different suit. You had a green suit on then," he said.

Rothenberg admitted he had worn a green suit Sunday, changing to gray yesterday, but in the face of Edney's positive statement denied knowledge of the shooting.

Menace of Croup.

Croup is a spasm of the larynx which comes on very suddenly. Often in the middle of the night the baby will awaken with a harsh cough, and rough and difficult breathing. Sometimes the face may become blue. The child should be made to vomit in order to relax the spasm. This is best brought about by giving a teaspoonful or tablespoonful of ipecac. The inhalation of steam will help to shorten the attack. A croup-kettle is the best means of producing the steam. A tent made of blankets will aid in concentrating the steam. It is better to use a teaspoonful of compound tincture of benzoin to each pint of water used in the croup-kettle than steam alone. Mustard plasters, one part mustard to five parts flour, as well as warm compresses over the chest, are of benefit. For a child who has persistent attacks of croup it is best to ascertain whether enlarged tonsils and adenoids are not a factor. If they are present have them removed.—From the Delineator.

HUN WOMEN TORTURE VICTIMS

Repatriated English War Prisoners Tell of Revolting Red Cross Outrages.

FOOD AND WATER DENIED.

Soldiers Herded Into Filthy Cattle Cars and Cursed and Spat Upon by Women and Children.

The English government has just issued a report on the treatment of British prisoners of war by Germany, which is made up of the depositions of 48 officers and 77 noncommissioned officers and men, most of whom fell wounded into the hands of the enemy. These men were taken prisoners at the beginning of the war and have only recently been repatriated to England. Let them tell their own story, then think over it and see if it is not the duty of every American to put his money into Liberty Bonds and help America to put an end for all time to the military power of a people who could be guilty of such outrages.

Lieutenant Colonel Neish says:

"At Cologne I saw a female with a Red Cross badge on her after serving our escort of German soldiers with coffee deliberately pour the remaining contents of the can on the ground when requested to allow us to have some. During the journey to Sennelager—some 48 hours—we were given one meal—soup."

Maj. A. S. Peebles declares:

"At one station we asked two Red Cross ladies for a glass of water, saying it was for a wounded officer. They burst out laughing and said, 'Nothing for you English.'"

Captain Beman testifies:

"The German Red Cross gave no food to prisoners, wounded or otherwise. At times it is shown to them and then withdrawn, with kindly remarks that it is not for swine."

Captain Hargreaves asserts:

"At Liege I tried personally to get the German Red Cross officials to give our wounded men water. They refused. I saw some Red Cross nurses actually bring water in cans up to our men, show it to them and then pour it on the platform. This also happened to me personally. At Aix-la-Chapelle the excitement and anger of the crowd were indescribable. There was an elaborate Red Cross dressing station here. All water and food was rigorously refused us. The German wounded in the train had their wounds dressed. This was refused us."

Major Meiklejohn deposes:

"German Red Cross women refused us any food, calling us insulting names, and spat toward us, telling us they would give nothing to the English 'schweinhunde,' although we told them some of us were very ill and all wounded. I myself saw one and other officers saw several German women dressed as nurses and ladies and wearing the Red Cross deliberately empty bowls of soup on the platform before us, saying something about giving nothing to 'English swine.' Other officers, among whom, I understand, was Captain Pelham-Burn, Gordon Highlanders, saw Red Cross women spit in the soup before offering it to them.

"Throughout this journey the conduct of the German women, especially those dressed as Red Cross nurses, was revolting and barbarous beyond words, and as a result of the continuous brutality of Red Cross women and officials many prisoners of war besides myself have still a repugnance to seeing a Red Cross armlet."

In the whole record there is only one case given where the German Red Cross women showed any signs of human sympathy. Captain H. G. Will you read that a Chinese eight-oared shell poked its nose across the line at Poughkeepsie ahead of Cornell, or Syracuse, or Pennsylvania?

Don't laugh. It's a possibility.

At Columbia university Jim Rice, the veteran coach of the Blue and White, is not devoting all his time to the Caucasians in training. Far from that he is inclined to give a little bit more of his time to his Chinese oarsmen who are making the first Chinese crew in the history of American aquatics.

"These boys are light, compared to an American crew, but they have all the endurance of men bigger than they are," is Coach Rice's explanation. "Then, too, that coxswain, little Lee, knows his business. I don't always understand his shouts to his oarsmen, but they do, and they can sure hit up the pace when he gets going.

"To tell the truth, I was inclined to be skeptical when they came to me and wanted to make a crew. But they were very much in earnest, and so I took them in charge. Now I am becoming enthusiastic over them. They obey all orders like true soldiers and are picking up the finer points of rowing with remarkable speed. They'll make good, mark me, or I never saw a crew in my life."

Little Lee, the coxswain, is one of Columbia's leading wrestlers. Captain Kwong is a strong, well-built athlete and excels in the gymnasium. Every man in the bunch is a perfect specimen of Chinese manhood, and not one is a bit backward about entering into a regatta against American crews.

The Chinese crew at Columbia may not row at Poughkeepsie—that hasn't been decided yet—but they will undoubtedly compete in several regattas around New York and in New England. They want to test their mettle.

GRIFFITH FOR DAYLIGHT LAW

If Washingtonians Go to Business Earlier They Will Have More Time at Ball Park.

Clark Griffith, manager of the Washingtons, is a strong advocate of the proposed daylight-saving law which congress may adopt. Griff argues that if Washingtonians go to business earlier in the day they will have more time to spend at the Washington ball park. Other baseball magnates and managers are said to favor this legislation, which in their opinion would increase the daily attendance figures to a marked degree. Games could be started at four o'clock, with plenty of time to complete them before sunset.

SIR THOMAS LIPTON STILL AFTER THE CUP

Sir Thomas Lipton, personal challenger for the America's cup, consistent loser and good sportsman, has not abandoned hope of eventually capturing the famous trophy.

In fact, the British yachtsman already is laying plans to send Shamrock IV after the coveted prize as soon as the war ends.

Capt. Walter M. Marks, Sir Thomas' representative, arrived in an American port recently with instructions to inspect the cup challenger, which has been laid up in the Erie basin since the postponement of the races of 1914. Captain Marks is to report to the owner as to her condition.

CITY HOME HAS ITS CHEF AGAIN

Eugene Harris Resumed Work as Chef Monday—Had Served 19 Years But Had Retired Owing to Ill Health—Routine Matters.

Forty-six mouths watered in anticipation at the City Home on Monday when it was learned that Eugene Harris, who had served as chef at that institution for nineteen years, has returned to resume his duties. Chef Harris resigned last year owing to ill health, and it is hardly necessary to say that his cheerful presence and his culinary skill were missed from the kitchen. Mr. Harris has since regained his health and is now back on the job

Superintendent Edmonston also reported that the services of a man to help Dan Herb run the City Home farm was needed but that it was a difficult problem to secure the right kind of a man who could plant, cultivate the ground, milk the cows and be generally handy about the farm. The question was discussed at length by the board and the matter was finally referred to the house committee.

Several routine matters were also discussed at the session at which Commissioner Osterhoudt presided as chairman in the absence of President Waterbury. Commissioners Davis, Lang and Coutant were in attendance

The reports of Superintendent Edmonston were read as follows and filed.

There are 25 males and 21 females, a total of 46 inmates, in the City Home.

The Kingston City Hospital report showed 16 cases with 196 days' treatment.

The board then adjourned.

FARMERS OUT OF DRAFT.

Affidavits Necessary and Must Not be Delay in Making Them.

Farmers are being urged by the state college of agriculture not to delay filing the necessary affidavits if they have farm employes who are affected by the new draft recently announced The provost marshal general has ordered that "men actively, assiduously, and completely engaged in the planting of a crop but who are listed in Class I of the draft and within the new quota should be deferred until the end of the new quota."

The local boards, however, cannot act on their own initiative in releasing men employed on farms Their duty demands that they summon all men listed with them as eligible. It is necessary, therefore, for the farmer to take the initiative and file an affidavit showing that the man or men whose labor is needed on his farm come within the specifications of the provost marshal general.

"If farmers whose hands are affected in this new call," says the United States employment service of the department of labor, "fail to follow this advice, they should have no cause for complaint if their men are taken from them at this critical time."

In other words, it is up to the farmer to show that he needs the man to help produce food more than the army needs him for fighting. And if his affidavits are satisfactory, he will keep his help.

Musicians Are Wanted.

The Bailey Fife, Drum and Bugle Corps is looking for new members, and any man wishing to join can do so by applying at Bailey's store on Broadway, this evening, at 8 o'clock There is an opening for fife, drum and bugle players Instructions will be given to new beginners.

FOOD QUESTION BOX.

These are some of the questions women are asking on food problems. They are answered by the Department of Home Economics of the State College of Agriculture through the Ulster County Conservation Agent. Address inquiries to the Food Question Box, Miss L. M. Stuart, No. 74 John street, Kingston, New York.

1 I am not able to buy coarse cornmeal, is the fine meal just as good?

The fine cornmeal is made by the new milling process which removes the outer layers and the germ For this reason certain valuable nutrients which are located in the germ and outer layers and which are not in the rest of the grain, are lost. The finely milled meal, however, keeps better than the coarse or the home-ground product, and for this reason is preferred by millers and dealers.

In using the fine cornmeal, more liquid is usually required and more fat may be added to replace the fat lost by the removal of the germ.

2. What is grayfish? Is it good for food?

The grayfish is found on both shores of the North Atlantic ocean, south almost to the Tropics. They travel in great schools, feed on fish, crabs, shrimp and even lobsters, and weigh from 5 to 15 pounds, 7 being a common weight. The grayfish is a trim, clean, clipper-built fish, swift in the water as is required by its piratical habits. The hide is sometimes used for polishing fine metal, ivory and wooden articles, and gives promise of producing a leather suitable for the production of small novelties The liver is valuable for its oil which is used particularly for dressing leather. The utilization of these by-products makes it possible to can the fish as food at an attractively low price

It is excellent when eaten fresh and can be cooked and used in the same way as other varieties of fish It can also be preserved in a number of ways, salted and dried, like cod, smoked and canned in a variety of styles

3. How can I cook potatoes so that there will be a minimum of waste?

Steaming and baking potatoes cause the least loss of good value. If potatoes are cooked in water, they should not be pared until after they are cooked, they should be put on to cook in boiling salted water If, in order to save time, they are pared before being cooked, the water used in cooking should be saved and used in soup, gravy, bread or stews. To use all the nutriment in a baked potato, skin and all should be eaten. This is entirely wholesome.

FORGOT TO COME BACK WITH CHANGE

Victor Penny Went to Work for Judge Clearwater Last Week, but When He Got Ten Dollar Bill He Did Not Come Back.

Last Thursday a man giving his name as Victor Penny called at the residence of Judge Clearwater on Albany avenue and applied for a job cleaning up the grounds. He was put to work Friday and worked until Saturday noon, when he asked for his pay. Mrs. Clearwater had but a ten dollar bill, and she gave it to him, the man promising to return with the change. Victor, however, forgot to come back. The ten spot probably looked good to him and he promptly left town as nothing further has been heard from him.

The KITCHEN CABINET

The beauty of the house is order, the blessing of the house is contentment, the glory of the house is hospitality, the crown of the house is godliness.

GOOD EATING.

Those who are fortunate enough to be able to obtain rabbit will not suffer for good, wholesome meat. A rabbit should be hung two or three days, not longer unless kept in cold storage. The age of the rabbit may be told by the paw. If there is a little hard nut in the paw which cannot be easily broken with the thumb and finger, the rabbit is an old one. If it has entirely disappeared and the paw resists pressure it is too old for anything except a stew. When dressing a rabbit there is a thin membrane which extends from the flanks over the intestines. If this is removed the strong flavor which to many is highly objectionable, goes with it, making the flesh delightfully sweet.

Rabbit Fricassee.—A young rabbit is the only kind to use for such a dish. After carefully dressing it cut it up in serving-sized pieces or into quarters and eighths. Roll in highly seasoned flour and brown in a little hot chicken fat, then simmer until tender and when nearly cooked add cream or rich milk. Cook until a nice gravy is formed, then serve hot with mashed potatoes.

Rabbit With Carrots.—Prepare the rabbit as for a fricassee, and when browned add a quart or less of finely shredded carrots cut in matchlike pieces with a small chopped onion and plenty of seasoning; add water to simmer and let cook slowly in a frying casserole two or three hours.

Luncheon Dish.—Free left-over fish from bones and skin and flake with a fork. To a cupful allow a teaspoonful of flour with a quarter of a teaspoonful of mustard, a dash of cayenne, a tablespoonful of butter and a few dashes of salt. Rub these ingredients together, adding enough lemon juice to moisten and half fill scallop shells, cover with buttered bread crumbs and set in the oven until well heated through.

Dry cake crumbs make excellent puddings stirred into a custard and baked.

ESOPUS.

Esopus, April 1.—On Wednesday evening, April 3, the Otetiani Tribe, No 466, Improved Order of Red Men, and the Patriotic Order of Sons of America, will give a farewell reception in Elmore Hall to the young men from West Park and Esopus who are soon to leave for the training camps, and who later will probably take part in the great war. Several speakers have been engaged for the evening and the friends and neighbors of the future soldier boys are cordially invited to be present and with a smile and hand shake speed them on their way.

Mrs. Alexander Smith returned from her visit to Jersey City on Saturday.

Prayer meeting will be omitted this week as the pastor, Rev. J. J. Lyons, will be absent attending the annual conference at Newburgh, and there will not be any services in the church next Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert C. Ashton came from Brooklyn to Highland by train on Saturday and from there to Esopus by automobile, bringing with them Mr. Ashton's mother, Mrs. Edward Ashton, who has been absent from her home for several weeks. Mrs. Dickerson also arrived from Kingston a few hours later and we are pleased to state that her arm is almost restored to its normal condition Mr. and Mrs. Ashton returned to Brooklyn on Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Peter Scheide visited friends in New York city for a few days last week, returning on Saturday with her daughter, Miss Mary Geoghegan, of the above city.

Charles C. Beaver was a week end guest of his sister, Mrs. Schuyler Oughcltree, of Port Ewen.

The evening service at the Methodist Church was well attended and the Easter sermon delivered by the Rev. J. J. Lyons was listened to with much interest. The altar was entirely filled with beautiful potted Easter lilies and palms, which were kindly sent from the large green houses of Mrs. Harry Payne Bingham, and their fragrance permeated the entire room. Special music was rendered by the chorus choir Miss Rena Sattong and Miss Hazel Mott each sang a solo in a pleasing manner and Mrs. Fred Martin accompanied the organ and singers with her violin. Altogether the service was a fitting one for the closing of the conference year.

John L. Schultz, treasurer of the Methodist Church, read his report for the year on Sunday evening All bills are paid, including pastor's salary, district superintendent, janitor, coal bills and other expenses of the church and Sunday school, and there still remains a small surplus with which to start the new conference year. The congregation, as well as the treasurer, should feel highly gratified to know that in these strenuous times the church is able to make such a fine record.

CITY HOME HAS ITS CHEF AGAIN

Eugene Harris Resumed Work as Chef Monday—Had Served 19 Years But Had Retired Owing to Ill Health—Routine Matters.

Forty-six mouths watered in anticipation at the City Home on Monday when it was learned that Eugene Harris, who had served as chef at that institution for nineteen years, has returned to resume his duties. Chef Harris resigned last year owing to ill health, and it is hardly necessary to say that his cheerful presence and his culinary skill were missed from the kitchen. Mr. Harris has since regained his health and is now back on the job.

Superintendent Edmonston also reported that the services of a man to help Dan Herb run the City Home farm was needed but that it was a difficult problem to secure the right kind of a man who could plant, cultivate the ground, milk the cows and be generally handy about the farm. The question was discussed at length by the board and the matter was finally referred to the house committee.

Several routine matters were also discussed at the session at which Commissioner Osterhoudt presided as chairman in the absence of President Waterbury. Commissioners Davis, Lang and Coutant were in attendance.

The reports of Superintendent Edmonston were read as follows and filed:

FARMERS OUT OF DRAFT.

Affidavits Necessary and Must Not be Delay in Making Them.

Farmers are being urged by the state college of agriculture not to delay filing the necessary affidavits if they have farm employes who are affected by the new draft recently announced. The provost marshal general has ordered that "men actively, assiduously, and completely engaged in the planting of a crop but who are listed in Class 1 of the draft and within the new quota should be deferred until the end of the new quota."

The local boards, however, cannot act on their own initiative in releasing men employed on farms. Their duty demands that they summon all men listed with them as eligible. It is necessary, therefore, for the farmer to take the initiative and file an affidavit showing that the man or men whose labor is needed on his farm come within the specifications of the provost marshal general.

"If farmers whose hands are affected in this new call," says the United States employment service of the department of labor, "fail to follow this advice, they should have no cause for complaint if their men are taken from them at this critical time."

In other words, it is up to the farmer to show that he needs the man to help produce food more than the army needs him for fighting. And if his affidavits are satisfactory, he will keep his help.

Musicians Are Wanted.

The Bailey Fife, Drum and Bugle Corps is looking for new members, and any man wishing to join can do so by applying at Bailey's store on Broadway, this evening, at 8 o'clock. There is an opening for fife, drum and bugle players. Instructions will be given to new beginners.

FOOD QUESTION BOX.

These are some of the questions women are asking on food problems. They are answered by the Department of Home Economics of the State College of Agriculture through the Ulster County Conservation Agent. Address inquiries to the Food Question Box, Miss L. M. Stuart, No. 74 John street, Kingston, New York.

1. I am not able to buy coarse cornmeal; is the fine meal just as good?

The fine cornmeal is made by the new milling process which removes the outer layers and the germ. For this reason certain valuable nutrients which are located in the germ and outer layers and which are not in the rest of the grain, are lost. The finely milled meal, however, keeps better than the coarse or the home-ground product, and for this reason is preferred by millers and dealers.

In using the fine cornmeal, more liquid is usually required and more fat may be added to replace the fat lost by the removal of the germ.

2. What is grayfish? Is it good for food?

The grayfish is found on both shores of the North Atlantic ocean, south almost to the Tropics. They travel in great schools, feed on fish, crabs, shrimp and even lobsters, and weigh from 5 to 15 pounds, 7 being a common weight. The grayfish is a trim, clean, clipper-built fish, swift in the water as is required by its piratical habits. The hide is sometimes used for polishing fine metal, ivory and wooden articles, and gives promise of producing a leather suitable for the production of small novelties. The liver is valuable for its oil which is used particularly for dressing leather. The utilization of these by-products makes it possible to can the fish as food at an attractively low price.

It is excellent when eaten fresh and can be cooked and used in the same way as other varieties of fish. It can also be preserved in a number of ways; salted and dried like cod, smoked, and canned in a variety of styles.

3. How can I cook potatoes so that there will be a minimum of waste?

Steaming and baking potatoes cause the least loss of good value. If potatoes are cooked in water, they should not be pared until after they are cooked; they should be put on to cook in boiling salted water. If, in order to save time, they are pared before being cooked, the water used in cooking should be saved and used in soup, gravy, bread or stews. To use all the nutriment in a baked potato, skin and all should be eaten. This is entirely wholesome.

Rousing Waldo—He's sore because he got the third degree yesterday and didn't get any class pin.

FORGOT TO COME BACK WITH CHANGE

Victor Penny Went to Work for Judge Clearwater Last Week, but When He Got Ten Dollar Bill He Did Not Come Back.

Last Thursday a man giving his name as Victor Penny called at the residence of Judge Clearwater on Albany avenue and applied for a job cleaning up the grounds. He was put to work Friday and worked until Saturday noon, when he asked for his pay. Mrs. Clearwater had but a ten dollar bill, and she gave it to him, the man promising to return with the change. Victor, however, forgot to come back. The ten spot probably looked good to him and he promptly left town as nothing further has been heard from him.

The KITCHEN CABINET

The beauty of the house is order, the blessing of the house is contentment, the glory of the house is hospitality, the crown of the house is godliness.

GOOD EATING.

Those who are fortunate enough to be able to obtain rabbit will not suffer for good, wholesome meat. A rabbit should be hung two or three days, not longer unless kept in cold storage. The age of the rabbit may be told by the paw. If there is a little hard nut in the paw which cannot be easily broken with the thumb and finger, the rabbit is an old one. If it has entirely disappeared and the paw resists pressure it is too old for anything except a stew. When dressing a rabbit there is a thin membrane which extends from the flanks over the intestines. If this is removed the strong flavor which to many is highly objectionable, goes with it, making the flesh delightfully sweet.

Rabbit Fricassee.—A young rabbit is the only kind to use for such a dish. After carefully dressing it cut it up in serving-sized pieces or into quarters and eighths. Roll in highly seasoned flour and brown in a little hot chicken fat, then simmer until tender and when nearly cooked add cream or rich milk. Cook until a nice gravy is formed, then serve hot with mashed potatoes.

Rabbit With Carrots.—Prepare the rabbit as for a fricassee, and when browned add a quart or less of finely shredded carrots cut in matchlike pieces with a small chopped onion and plenty of seasoning; add water to simmer and let cook slowly in a frying pan on the back of the stove or in a casserole two or three hours.

Luncheon Dish.—Free left-over fish from bones and skin and flake with a fork. To a cupful allow a teaspoonful of flour with a quarter of a teaspoonful of mustard, a dash of cayenne, a tablespoonful of butter and a few dashes of salt. Rub these ingredients together, adding enough lemon juice to moisten and half fill scallop shells, cover with buttered bread crumbs and set in the oven until well heated through.

Dry cake crumbs make excellent puddings stirred into a custard and baked.

ESOPUS.

Esopus, April 1.—On Wednesday evening, April 3, the Otetiani Tribe, No. 466, Improved Order of Red Men, and the Patriotic Order of Sons of America, will give a farewell reception in Elmore Hall to the young men from West Park and Esopus who are soon to leave for the training camps, and who later will probably take part in the great war. Several speakers have been engaged for the evening and the friends and neighbors of the future soldier boys are cordially invited to be present and with a smile and hand shake speed them on their way.

Mrs. Alexander Simth returned from her visit to Jersey City on Saturday.

Prayer meeting will be omitted this week as the pastor, Rev. J. J. Lyons, will be absent attending the annual conference at Newburgh, and there will not be any services in the church next Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert C. Ashton came from Brooklyn to Highland by train on Saturday and from there to Esopus by automobile, bringing with them Mr. Ashton's mother, Mrs. Edward Ashton, who has been absent from her home for several weeks. Mrs. Dickerson also arrived from Kingston a few hours later and we are pleased to state that her arm is almost restored to its normal condition. Mr. and Mrs. Ashton returned to Brooklyn on Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Peter Scheide visited friends in New York city for a few days last week, returning on Saturday with her daughter, Miss Mary Geoghegan, of the above city.

Charles C. Beaver was a week end guest of his sister, Mrs. Schuyler Ougheltree, of Port Ewen.

The evening service at the Methodist Church was well attended and the Easter sermon delivered by the Rev. J. J. Lyons was listened to with much interest. The altar was entirely filled with beautiful potted Easter lillies and palms, which were kindly sent from the large green houses of Mrs. Harry Payne Bingham, and their fragrance permeated the entire room. Special music was rendered by the chorus choir. Miss Rena Sattong and Miss Hazel Mott each sang a solo in a pleasing manner and Mrs. Fred Martin accompanied the organ and singers with her violin. Altogether the service was a fitting one for the closing of the conference year.

John L. Schultz, treasurer of the Methodist Church, read his report for the year on Sunday evening. All bills are paid, including pastor's salary, district superintendent, janitor, coal bills and other expenses of the church and Sunday school, and there still remains a small surplus with which to start the new conference year. The congregation, as well as the treasurer, should feel highly gratified to know that in these strenuous times the church is able to make such a fine record.

But saves dollars,
Get him on the run.

To waste good feed on poor cows is foolish; to waste good cows on poor feed is criminal.

Be on the watch for the first dandelion. A lot of folks think that nothing is quite so good in the spring as the first mess of greens.

The father who refuses to let anyone else teach his boy how to put a worm on a fish-hook seldom has to complain about the "boy problem."

Nothing would please the Kaiser more than to have many American acres planted with seed which will not grow. Fool him by testing all seed, especially corn.

If you first plant your garden on paper it will be easier later to plant it in the ground. It's easy to make a chart giving all the information you will need about the vegetables you want to grow. The state college of agriculture at Ithaca will tell you more about it.

How to Use Ballot.

Monday evening at School No 1, Secretary Francis Thornberry, of the Y. M. C. A., delivered an interesting address as to the use of the ballot, how to fill it out and other interesting information intended for the use of the women who have now the right to vote in New York state. The address was given under the auspices of the Parent-Teachers' Association, and Mr. Thornberry spoke in the place of Attorney A. D. Van Buren, who was unable to be present.

VICTORY MENUS.

These menus, planned to conserve time, labor and money, to save the foods that are scarce and use those of which there is an abundance, are Victory Menus in more senses than one. They are prepared by the Department of Home Economics of the State College of Agriculture and endorsed by the New York State Food Commission.

Wednesday—Wheatless Day.

Breakfast—*Stewed prunes, hominy grits cooked in milk, *potato muffins, coffee.

Lunch or Supper—Hominy and cheese fritters, potato bread, oranges and bananas with cocoanut.

Dinner—Frankfurters a la creme, reheated stuffed potatoes, *stewed tomatoes, potato bread, *chocolate cornstarch pudding.

Milk for the children to drink at each meal.

(*May be omitted and still leave the meal balanced.)

Coffee in itself has no food value and so its only contribution toward nourishing the body is the milk that it contains. It does act as a stimulant and to those who can stand this stimulant, it is not harmful. Many people, however, cannot drink coffee. It is an expensive luxury which gives no return of value when used. A glass of warm milk substituted for the morning coffee is an experiment worth trying.

Hominy and Cheese Fritters.

2½ cups hominy mush, 2-3 cup stale crumbs, ½ cup milk, 2 eggs, 1 small onion, 2 tablespoons chopped parsley, 1 teaspoon salt, pepper.

Mix the mush and the crumbs; add the eggs beaten and the milk gradually to form a stiff paste. If the mush is very moist the full amount of milk will not be needed. Stir in the grated onion, the parsley, salt and pepper. Drop by spoonfuls into a hot greased fry.

Frankfurters a la Creme.

1 pound frankfurters, 2 eggs, 1 pint milk, ½ teaspoon salt, 3 tablespoons flour, pepper.

Remove the skin from the frankfurters and put them into a buttered baking dish. Mix the flour, salt, pepper, add the beaten eggs and the milk; beat for 5 minutes and pour over the meat. Bake for 30 minutes in a moderate oven. Serve hot.

Recipes for any of the dishes in these menus which cannot be found in cook books may be had by writing to the Department of Home Economics, State College of Agriculture, Ithaca, N. Y.

Monday evening at School No. 1, Secretary Francis Thornberry, of the Y. M. C. VICTORY MENUS.

These menus, planned to conserve time, labor and money, to save the foods that are scare and use those of which there is an abundance, are Victory Menus in more senses than one. They are prepared by the Department of Home Economics of the State College of Agriculture and endorsed by the New York State Food Commission.

Wednesday—Wheatless Day.

Breakfast—*Stewed prunes, hominy grits cooked in milk, *potato muffins, coffee.

Lunch or Supper—Hominy and cheese fritters, potato bread, oranges and bananas with cocoanut.

Dinner—Frankfurters a la creme, reheated stuffed potatoes, *stewed tomatoes, potato bread, *chocolate cornstarch pudding.

Milk for the children to drink at each meal.

(*May be omitted and still leave the meal balanced.)

Coffee in itself has no food value and so its only contribution toward nourishing the body is the milk that it contains. It does act as a stimulant and to those who can stand this stimulant, it is not harmful. Many people, however, cannot drink coffee. It is an expensive luxury which gives no return of value when used. A glass of warm milk substituted for the morning coffee is an experiment worth trying.

Hominy and Cheese Fritters.

2½ cups hominy mush, 2-3 cup stale crumbs, ½ cup milk, 2 eggs, 1 small onion, 2 tablespoons chopped parsley, 1 teaspoon salt, pepper.

Mix the mush and the crumbs; add the eggs beaten and the milk gradually to form a stiff paste. If the mush is very moist the full amount of milk will not be needed. Stir in the grated onion, the parsley, salt and pepper. Drop by spoonfuls into a hot greased fry.

Frankfurters a la Creme.

1 pound frankfurters, 2 eggs, 1 pint milk, ½ teaspoon salt, 3 tablespoons flour, pepper.

Remove the skin from the frankfurters and put them into a buttered baking dish. Mix the flour, salt, pepper, add the beaten eggs and the milk; beat for 5 minutes and pour over the meat. Bake for 30 minutes in a moderate oven. Serve hot.

Recipes for any of the dishes in these menus which cannot be found in cook books may be had by writing to the Department of Home Economics, State College of Agriculture, Ithaca, N. Y.

SPECIAL ELECTION UP TO THE COURT

Judge Hasbrouck Reserves Decision on Local Option Petition's Validity —Objectors Claim Petition Lacks 33 of Necessary Number of Signers

The legality of the petition filed with City Clerk Doremus for a special lection in this city on April 16 at which the local option questions may be voted on was argued before Judge Hasbrouck at the special term of the Supreme Court held in connection with the opening of the trial court at Hudson Monday afternoon by Frank W. Brooks, counsel for John F. Irwin, the objector, and by Alfred D. Van Buren attorney for the local option committee who appeared with Joseph M. Fowler, of counsel.

The affidavit of Mr Irwin shows that there were 5,672 votes cast at the last general election held in this city and under the law the signatures of twenty-five per cent of qualified electors which must appear on the petition for the special election would be 1,418.

The number of names counted on the petition by City Clerk Doremus is 1,606. Of this number, according to Mr. Irwin's affidavit, 29 names were disregarded at the request of Alfred D. Van Buren, counsel for the local option committee. Twenty-seven requests of signers for the withdrawal of their names were filed but not allowed by the city clerk.

The validity of 67 signatures are attacked by Mr. Irwin because of a defect in the caption in the affidavit taken by John R. Monroe by which it appears that Mr Monroe is a notary public in and for the county of New York, and the validity of eighty-five signatures is attacked because of defective dates opposite the signature, the law requiring the date to be shown while in these cases either ditto marks were used in place of any date, or the year was omitted, or there was some other defect.

Other signatures also are attacked by Mr. Irwin because of their illegibility, or because there are vacant lots at the street numbers given in the address, or because house numbers are omitted, or because the address is otherwise incorrectly given. In one case the address is given as "13 Willow avenue," while there is no such street in the city. The address of John Tully is given as "103 North street," which is a vacant lot.

Three signatures appear twice on the petition: Charles M. King, Philetus Johnson and Guernsey Burger.

Signatures of petitioners were made in the presence of someone and the person in whose presence the signatures were made is required to swear to that fact before a notary public or other person qualified by law to take oaths within the city of Kingston. The affidavits in a number of cases were taken by John R. Monroe, whose affidavit bears the caption: "County of New York, City of Ulster." The number of signatures on sheets of the petition taken before various citizens was as follows: P. C. Weyant, 7; Alfred W. Tongue, 5; Irving W. Scott, 6; Harry G. Smith, 4; J. D. Rodman, 9; Horace S. Maxon, 7; George E. Lowe, 1; Charles G. Ellis, 22; Hiram Brink, 3. Three signatures were not acknowledged by anybody.

S. Israel, who is one of the signers, is alleged to be not a citizen but an alien and therefore disqualified from signing.

Philip Lutzin, who is one of the signers of the petition for the special election, submitted an affidavit that he was informed the petition was for the purpose of allowing women to vote some time in April; on ascertaining what the purpose of the petition was, he requested both C. B. Crugin and Mr. Van Buren to withdraw his name. Affidavits of Harris Brown and Charles A. Davis state that they asked to have their names withdrawn from the petition and believed it had been done; Charles Anderson made an affidavit that he never intended to sign the petition and does not live at the address given; and the papers show that Jacob H. Coons, James Butler, Charles Anderson, Norman West and Francis West signed by making their mark. Frank Swan made an affidavit that he did not personally sign the petition and a similar affidavit was made by Patrick J. Norton.

On behalf of the local option committee, in regard to the Norton affidavit, the Rev. C. G. Ellis testified that he did not know Norton personally, and did not recollect him, but that he had taken the name of a man who signed his name Patrick J. Norton.

John R. Monroe, who took the affidavits which are attacked as defective, was sworn and testified that he is a notary in and for Ulster county.

With regard to S. Israel, it was stated that he had said he was a voter which was taken as presumptive evidence of his citizenship.

Mr Van Buren submitted a statement showing that of the 1,606 signatures of the petition, he consented that 32 be disallowed as defective, which would leave 1,574 names on the petition, and allowing for three withdrawals would leave 1,571 valid signatures on the petition. Of the 27 withdrawals only three of the persons who sought to withdraw their names had served notice on the committee, so that the other twenty-four withdrawals were disputed. Of the number which were consented to be stricken from the petition, 22 had signed on Sunday. Even if the twenty-seven withdrawals were allowed, he contended, there would remain 1,547 valid signatures.

If the number of signatures attacked on legal grounds by Mr. Brooks are disallowed, amounting to 221, the petition would contain 221 valid signatures, or thirty-three less than the required number.

Mr. Van Buren contended that the defects to which objection was made were not of sufficient consequence to invalidate the petition but Mr. Brooks contended that in granting the privilege of a special election the legislature insisted that certain exact formalities should be complied with which has not been done.

Judge Hasbrouck reserved decision.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, April 2.—The most prominent feature of the stock market at the opening day was the small volume of business. There were no sales of Marine Preferred in the first fifteen minutes and only a few of the minor steel industrials were traded in during that period. General Motors, Industrial Alcohol and Utah Copper were among other stocks in which there were no sales. Price movements in the few issues in which there was a moderate amount of business were irregular. Miami was directly influenced by the reduction of the dividend yesterday afternoon and declined 1¼ to 29¾. Sinclair Oil was down ⅞ to 26½. Distillers sold ex dividend of 2 per cent at 39¼ and then gained ½. Steel Common sold off ¼ at 91⅝, and Reading, in which there was only a single transaction, showed a loss of ¼ at 81¾.

Continued recessions were noticed in Sinclair Oil and Studebaker because of the persistent talk about dividend uncertainty. Studebaker fell ⅞ to 37¾. Miami sustained a further loss, selling down to 28⅞ against 31 at the close yesterday. American Can and Foundry dropped one point to 78¼ on a few sales. Industrial Alcohol dropped 1¾ to 120½, and Distillers Securities fell down from 39¾ to 38½. Steel Common was extremely quiet, ranging from 90⅜ to 89 all through the first hour. Government bonds were steady; railway and other bonds steady.

The most prominent feature of the trading in the afternoon was the second development of strength in Studebaker. The stock rallied over 2 points to 39½. Sinclair Oil also showed a firmer tone, moving up ¾ to 26⅞. Union Pacific was in supply, selling down over one point to 119¼. Most of the other standard issues held steady with fractional changes.

The majority of changes during final trading in the stock market today were to lower levels. Steel Common sold down to 89⅞ and Union Pacific dropped to 118⅞. Studebaker after rallying 2 points to 39½, reacted to 39 and Distillers Securities dropped nearly one point to 38½.

Almost Forgotten Boy Prodigy.

William Henry West Betty, perhaps the greatest of all boy actors, made his first appearance on the London stage at the Drury Lane theater, December 1, 1804. Betty, who was universally known as "the Young Roscius," was then thirteen years old. He began his stage career at the age of eleven, in Belfast, playing the roles of Osman, Young Norval and Romeo, and soon all Ireland was wild over him. His stay in Dublin ended a triumphal tour. During his engagements in Drury Lane and Covent Garden theaters the boy received $5,000 weekly.

Danger in "Pushing" Pupils.

At one of the institutes held in Toronto, Chief Inspector Cowley expressed the opinion that there was as much danger in pushing a pupil on as in keeping him back. "Hurry Slowly," is a good motto, he said. He gave statistics to show that out of 61,000 pupils due for promotion last summer only 12,000 passed. The reason for this included irregularity, ill-health, lack of ability, poor home conditions and slow mental development.

OLD DEMON RUM MAY YET BE TIED UP

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, April 2.—Indications that the leaders have agreed upon the passage of the statewide prohibition bill which prohibits traffic in all liquors other than wines and beers after December 31, 1918, were rife today.

Senator Brown, majority leader, had the measure, which is now in general orders, sent back to committee for amendment with instructions to report forthwith. The amendment clarified the provision limiting the alcoholic content of beers and wines, placing control in the hands of the commissioner of excise.

At the same time Senator Emerson admitted his proposal to secure consideration of the federal ratification amendment was practically dead. He expressed the opinion that the bill making the state dry December 31 would pass.

ELLENVILLE.

Ellenville, April 2.—The second of the patriotic lectures under the direction of the Men's Bible Class of the Reformed Church held in the high school auditorium Friday evening last was enjoyed to the profit of all attending. The subject, a timely one, "England And Her Allies," and the lecturer, H. W. Coons. The very beautiful pictures as thrown upon the screen and so very ably explained by Mr. Coons, will remain a lasting memory of England; her splendid men from King George; also the country, the colonies of Great Britain, the splendid women from the queen; the buildings, etc. Preceding the lecture there was music by the high school orchestra, under the excellent leader, Mr. Rosenthal. Several songs by the Girls' Glee Club and a presentation to the ten members of Boy Scouts of the emblems won in connection with the Second Liberty Loan. The Rev. J. E. Appley presented the emblems. It was altogether a very pleasant evening and the third lecture is looked forward to and the time will be announced later.

The Easter services in the different churches of the village were well attended. The very beautiful weather, just ideal for Easter, added charm to the occasion. At St. John's Episcopal Church the large surpliced choir was ably assisted by an orchestra of several pieces, and Dr. Hobson delivered two very excellent Easter sermons, and the music was appropriate at the M. E. Church. The Rev. J. E. Appley delivered the sermons both morning and evening. The choir under the direction of Organist Campbell rendered fine anthems and Mrs. J. W. Rapp at the morning service contributed a beautiful vocal solo entitled, "Christ Is Risen Today." At the evening service Mrs. E. B. Kimble in a fine contralto voice, sang a very beautiful solo, "An Easter Eventime Song." At the Reformed Church, both morning and evening, Easter was observed with appropriate music and sermons. At the morning service the pastor, the Rev. Walter S. Maines, delivered a very excellent sermon. The theme was "The Life Immortal." The offertory anthem, "Jesus Christ is Risen Today," was well rendered by the large choir and orchestra. Miss Evelyn B. Bailey contributed a fine vocal solo. At the evening service the choir rendered "Why Seek Ye?" a very bright, beautiful anthem. The subject of the pastor's very able address was "Who Shall Roll Us Away the Stone." There were floral decorations, although not as elaborate as usual in the different churches. At the Lutheran Church the pastor, Rev. G. H. Coriels, delivered two excellent Easter sermons and there was music by the choir and congregation appropriate and large congregations at both morning and evening services.

Australian Wool Romance.

Australian wool, on which has been built up much of the colonial prosperity justly celebrated, has a most romantic history. Its real hero was a certain Capt. John Macarthur, a soldier of the crown, whose father had fought with Prince Charlie at Culloden. Settling in New South Wales soon after Governor Philipp arrived there, he saw the possibilities for growing fine wool and by the luckiest accident was able in 1796 to import five merino ewes and three rams from Cape Colony. They had been presented to the Dutch government there by the king of Spain from the famed Escurial flock. These, judiciously added to by Macarthur, were the beginnings of the vast Australian sheep industry of today. The first shipment of colonial wool was 245 pounds, in 1807, and now the export runs into hundreds of millions.

His Duty Done.

The family is rather demonstrative when the various members of the household come and go. The grandchildren are expected to embrace every one at the beginning and at the end of a visit. Fred and Albert were getting into their clothing and making their hasty adieux preparatory to catching their train home after Christmas. "Hurry up, Fred," Albert shouted; "you're too slow for anything. I've got mine all kissed."

SPECIAL ELECTION UP TO THE COURT

Judge Hasbrouck Reserves Decision on Local Option Petition's Validity —Objectors Claim Petition Lacks 33 of Necessary Number of Signers

The legality of the petition filed with City Clerk Doremus for a special lection in this city on April 16 at which the local option questions may be voted on was argued before Judge Hasbrouck at the special term of the Supreme Court held in connection with the opening of the trial court at Hudson Monday afternoon by Frank W. Brooks, counsel for John F. Irwin, the objector, and by Alfred D. Van Buren attorney for the local option committee who appeared with Joseph M. Fowler, of counsel.

The affidavit of Mr. Irwin shows that there were 5,672 votes cast at the last general election held in this city and under the law the signatures of twenty-five per cent of qualified electors which must appear on the petition for the special election would be 1,418.

The number of names counted on the petition by City Clerk Doremus is 1,606. Of this number, according to Mr. Irwin's affidavit, 29 names were disregarded at the request of Alfred D. Van Buren, counsel for the local option committee. Twenty-seven requests of signers for the withdrawal of their names were filed but not allowed by the city clerk.

The validity of 67 signatures are attacked by Mr. Irwin because of a defect in the caption in the affidavit taken by John R. Monroe by which it appears that Mr. Monroe is a notary public in and for the county of New York, and the validity of eighty-five signatures is attacked because of defective dates opposite the signature, the law requiring the date to be shown while in these cases either ditto marks were used in place of any date, or the year was omitted, or there was some other defect.

Other signatures also are attacked by Mr. Irwin because of their illegibility, or because there are vacant lots at the street numbers given in the address, or because house numbers are omitted, or because the address is otherwise incorrectly given. In one case the address is given as "13 Willow avenue," while there is no such street in the city. The address of John Tully is given as "109 North street," which is a vacant lot.

Three signatures appear twice on the petition: Charles M. King, Philetus Johnson and Guernsey Burger.

Signatures of petitioners were made in the presence of someone and the person in whose presence the signatures were made is required to swear to that fact before a notary public or other person qualified by law to take oaths within the city of Kingston. The affidavits in a number of cases were taken by John R. Monroe, whose affidavit bears the caption: "County of New York, City of Ulster." The number of signatures on sheets of the petition taken before various citizens was as follows: P. C. Weyant, 7; Alfred W. Tongue, 5; Irving W. Scott, 6; Harry G. Smith, 4; J. D. Rodman, 9; Horace S. Maxon, 7; George E. Lowe, 1; Charles G. Ellis, 22; Hiram Brink, 3. Three signatures were not acknowledged by anybody.

S. Israel, who is one of the signers, is alleged to be not a citizen but an alien and therefore disqualified from signing.

Philip Lutzin, who is one of the signers of the petition for the special election, submitted an affidavit that he was informed the petition was for the purpose of allowing women to vote some time in April; on ascertaining what the purpose of the petition was, he requested both C. B. Cragin and Mr. Van Buren to withdraw his name. Affidavits of Harris Brown and Charles A. Davis state that they asked to have their names withdrawn from the petition and believed it had been done; Charles Anderson made an affidavit that he never intended to sign the petition and does not live at the address given; and the papers show that Jacob H. Coons, James Butler, Charles Anderson, Norman West and Francis West signed by making their mark. Frank Swan made an affidavit that he did not personally sign the petition and a similar affidavit was made by Patrick J. Norton.

On behalf of the local option committee, in regard to the Norton affidavit, the Rev. C. G. Ellis testified that he did not know Norton personally, and did not recollect him, but that he had taken the name of a man who signed his name Patrick J. Norton.

John R. Monroe, who took the affidavits which are attacked as defective, was sworn and testified that he is a notary in and for Ulster county.

With regard to S. Israel, it was stated that he had said he was a voter which was taken as presumptive evidence of his citizenship.

Mr. Van Buren submitted a statement showing that of the 1,606 signatures of the petition, he consented that 32 be disallowed as defective, which would leave 1,574 names on the petition, and allowing for three withdrawals would leave 1,571 valid signatures on the petition. Of the 27 withdrawals only three of the persons who sought to withdraw their names had served notice on the committee, so that the other twenty-four withdrawals were disputed. Of the number which were consented to be stricken from the petition, 22 had signed on Sunday. Even if the twenty-seven withdrawals were allowed, he contended, there would remain 1,547 valid signatures.

If the number of signatures attacked on legal grounds by Mr. Brooks are disallowed, amounting to 221, the petition would contain 221 valid signatures, or thirty-three less than the required number.

Mr. Van Buren contended that the defects to which objection was made were not of sufficient consequence to invalidate the petition but Mr. Brooks contended that in granting the privilege of a special election the legislature insisted that certain exact formalities should be complied with which has not been done.

Judge Hasbrouck reserved decision.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, April 2.—The most prominent feature of the stock market at the opening day was the small volume of business. There were no sales of Marine Preferred in the first fifteen minutes and only a few of the minor steel industrials were traded in during that period. General Motors, Industrial Alcohol and Utah Copper were among other stocks in which there were no sales. Price movements in the few issues in which there was a moderate amount of business were irregular. Miami was directly influenced by the reduction of the dividend yesterday afternoon and declined 1¼ to 29¾. Sinclair Oil was down ⅞ to 26⅛. Distillers sold ex dividend of 2 per cent at 39¼ and then gained ½. Steel Common sold off ¼ at 91⅜, and Reading, in which there was only a single transaction, showed a loss of ⅛ at 81¾.

Continued recessions were noticed in Sinclair Oil and Studebaker because of the persistent talk about dividend uncertainty. Studebaker fell ⅞ to 37¾. Miami sustained a further loss, selling down to 28⅞ against 31 at the close yesterday. American Can and Foundry dropped one point to 78¼ on a few sales. Industrial Alcohol dropped 1¾ to 120½, and Distillers Securities fell down from 39¼ to 38½. Steel Common was extremely quiet, ranging from 90⅜ to 90 all through the first hour. Government bonds were steady; railway and other bonds steady.

The most prominent feature of the trading in the afternoon was the second development of strength in Studebaker. The stock rallied over 2 points to 39½. Sinclair Oil also showed a firmer tone, moving up ¾ to 26⅞. Union Pacific was in supply, selling down over one point to 119¼. Most of the other standard issues held steady with fractional changes.

The majority of changes during final trading in the stock market today were to lower levels. Steel Common sold down to 89⅞ and Union Pacific dropped to 118⅞. Studebaker after rallying 2 points to 39½, reacted to 39 and Distillers Securities dropped nearly one point to 38½.

In the Surrogate's Court.

Almost Forgotten Boy Prodigy.

William Henry West Betty, perhaps the greatest of all boy actors, made his first appearance on the London stage at the Drury Lane theater, December 1, 1804. Betty, who was universally known as "the Young Roscius," was then thirteen years old. He began his stage career at the age of eleven, in Belfast, playing the roles of Osman, Young Norval and Romeo, and soon all Ireland was wild over him. His stay in Dublin ended a triumphal tour. During his engagements in Drury Lane and Covent Garden theaters the boy received $5,000 weekly.

Danger in "Pushing" Pupils.

At one of the institutes held in Toronto, Chief Inspector Cowley expressed the opinion that there was as much danger in pushing a pupil on as in keeping him back. "Hurry Slowly," is a good motto, he said. He gave statistics to show that out of 61,000 pupils due for promotion last summer only 12,000 passed. The reason for this included irregularity, ill-health, lack of ability, poor home conditions and slow mental development.

OLD DEMON RUM MAY YET BE TIED UP

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, April 2.—Indications that the leaders have agreed upon the passage of the statewide prohibition bill which prohibits traffic in all liquors other than wines and beers after December 31, 1918, were rife today.

Senator Brown, majority leader, had the measure, which is now in general orders, sent back to committee for amendment with instructions to report forthwith. The amendment clarified the provision limiting the alcoholic content of beers and wines, placing control in the hands of the commmissioner of excise.

At the same time Senator Emerson admitted his proposal to secure consideration of the federal ratification amendment was practically dead. He expressed the opinion that the bill making the state dry December 31 would pass.

Something Else to Observe.

"I might have known that you would refuse me," said the poor and passionate young man who had failed to make an impression on the maiden's heart. "I noticed a metallic ring in your voice when I entered the drawing room tonight that boded me no good."

"And had you been a little more observant," she replied, "you would also have observed a metallic ring on my third finger that Billy Bagsful placed there last night."

ELLENVILLE.

Ellenville, April 2.—The second of the patriotic lectures under the direction of the Men's Bible Class of the Reformed Church held in the high school auditorium Friday evening last was enjoyed to the profit of all attending. The subject, a timely one, "England And Her Allies," and the lecturer, H. W. Coons. The very beautiful pictures as thrown upon the screen and so very ably explained by Mr. Coons, will remain a lasting memory of England; her splendid men from King George; also the country, the colonies of Great Britain, the splendid women from the queen; the buildings, etc. Preceding the lecture there was music by the high school orchestra, under the excellent leader, Mr. Rosenthal. Several songs by the Girls' Glee Club and a presentation to the ten members of Boy Scouts of the emblems won in connection with the Second Liberty Loan. The Rev. J. E. Appley presented the emblems. It was altogether a very pleasant evening and the third lecture is looked forward to and the time will be announced later.

The Easter services in the different churches of the village were well attended. The very beautiful weather, just ideal for Easter, added charm to the occasion. At St. John's Episcopal Church the large surpliced choir was ably assisted by an orchestra of several pieces, and Dr. Hobson delivered two very excellent Easter sermons, and the music was appropriate at the M. E. Church. The Rev. J. E. Appley delivered the sermons both morning and evening. The choir under the direction of Organist Campbell rendered fine anthems and Mrs. J. W. Rapp at the morning service contributed a beautiful vocal solo entitled, "Christ Is Risen Today." At the evening service Mrs. E. B. Kimble in a fine contralto voice, sang a very beautiful solo, "An Easter Eventime Song." At the Reformed Church, both morning and evening, Easter was observed with appropriate music and sermons. At the morning service the pastor, the Rev. Walter S. Maines, delivered a very excellent sermon. The theme was "The Life Immortal." The offertory anthem, "Jesus Christ is Risen Today," was well rendered by the large choir and orchestra. Miss Evelyn B. Bailey contributed a fine vocal solo. At the evening service the choir rendered "Why Seek Ye?" a very bright, beautiful anthem. The subject of the pastor's very able address was "Who Shall Roll Us Away the Stone." There were floral decorations, although not as elaborate as usual in the different churches. At the Lutheran Church the pastor, Rev. G. H. Corleis, delivered two excellent Easter sermons and there was music by the choir and congregation appropriate and large congregations at both morning and evening services.

Australian Wool Romance.

Australian wool, on which has been built up much of the colonial prosperity justly celebrated, has a most romantic history. Its real hero was a certain Capt. John Macarthur, a soldier of the crown, whose father had fought with Prince Charlie at Culloden. Settling in New South Wales soon after Governor Philipp arrived there, he saw the possibilities for growing fine wool and by the luckiest accident was able in 1796 to import five merino ewes and three rams from Cape Colony. They had been presented to the Dutch government there by the king of Spain from the famed Escurial flock. These, judiciously added to by Macarthur, were the beginnings of the vast Australian sheep industry of today. The first shipment of colonial wool was 245 pounds, in 1907, and now the export runs into hundreds of millions.

His Duty Done.

The family is rather demonstrative when the various members of the household come and go. The grandchildren are expected to embrace every one at the beginning and at the end of a visit. Fred and Albert were getting into their clothing and making their hasty adieux preparatory to catching their train home after Christmas. "Hurry up, Fred," Albert shouted; "you're too slow for anything. I've got mine all kissed."

60 EXTRA JURORS FOR MURDER CASE

Thomas Malone Will be Tried in County Court Next Monday Charged With the Killing of Joseph Michaeli — Strong Circumstantial Evidence.

In county court Monday afternoon sixty extra jurors were drawn for the Malone murder case, which will be begun next Monday morning, in the county court, County Judge Jenkins presiding.

District Attorney Traver and Assistant District Attorney Hasbrouck will conduct the case for The People. Over forty witnesses will be called.

Malone will be defended by John T. Loughran, a member of the staff of the law school of Fordham University. Mr. Loughran is a former Kingstonian.

The crime which Malone is charged with is one of the most cold blooded crimes in the history of the county and was described at the time in The Freeman by a Freeman man who went to Marlborough shortly after the crime was reported. The facts briefly are these:

Michaeli, moaning, and in a dying condition, was discovered by Vincent Marrano, his employer, on his (Marrano's) place, a short distance north of Marlborough, early on the morning of September 27.

Michaeli's skull was crushed in two places, his right ear was badly bruised, his face was scratched as if by finger nails, there were two bruises on his chest and other wounds.

Blood stains covered the spot. There was a trail of blood leading from the main road to the strawberry patch, where Michaeli was found. It looked as if he had been dragged from the road.

The cabin in which Michaeli lived was broken open and Michaeli's watch, articles of clothing and other things had been taken.

Malone was the last person seen with Michaeli. They had been together the night before and had some drinks in a cafe at Marlborough. It is known that Malone had picked a quarrel with Michaeli on several previous occasions. Malone is known as a quarrelsome man when he has been drinking.

Malone was arrested in Newburgh the same day that the crime was discovered. He left Marlborough that morning on a West Shore train, and according to some persons who saw him on the way to the depot, Malone was very much excited and he had a fresh cut on his face.

On November 26, just a day before the crime, Malone was released from the Kingston jail as the grand jury dismissed a charge of grand larceny against him.

He had been accused of stealing a horse and wagon belonging to Mr. Marrano, for whom Malone worked at that time.

Galluses Vindicated.

After blaming everything from grape seeds to patent flour for appendicitis, the medical sharks have finally landed on the trousers belt. They say appendicitis never became prevalent until the belt came into general use. For many years the humble suspender has been held up to scorn. Men, if their architecture refused to lend itself to belts, were forced to harbor suspenders as they did a secret sorrow. All sorts of subterfuges were invented, such as invisible suspenders, camouflaged beneath the outergarment. For, be it known, there is none so wretched as the man whose sky line is not adapted to belts, trying to maintain the status quo ante, and look unconcerned at the same time. Now one may wear suspenders and look the world in the face.—Wichita Beacon.

The Gusher

By George Elmer Cobb

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

Oil, nothing but oil—oil leases, oil royalties, oil indications, oil gushers, dry holes, prospects—the air was charged with it, people thought, dreamed, talked of little else.

Even the name of the little town had been changed. Once it was Rosline, now it was Oil City. Strange men invaded it. Queer machinery rigs came lumbering into town. A saloon sprang up, two of them—an old warehouse was transformed into a temporary hotel, eggs were scarce at any money, board and lodging brought all kinds of fancy prices, provisions had fabulous values, and land—anything near the newly discovered field—was bid for, bartered for, surrounded by a constantly increasing crowd of speculators.

Jim Colby at the little town caught fire with the rest of them. An "Exchange" had been opened by a shrewd lawyer where investors could be supplied with maps, charts, abstracts and guides.

"Think they hit the pick of the earth, eh?" remarked Jim in his easy, dubious way.

"Don't you, Jim?" inquired a friend.

"Well, I've got two forty-acre pieces down at Glasgow creek and never fancied there was oil there. You can have them cheap."

"How cheap? Get your papers. I'll deal on the nail head for cash," eagerly spoke up Harley Grove. He was a man Jim Colby did not like—and for a reason—but Jim said equably enough:

"I suppose you can bid if you want to," and went home to get the papers covering his two forties.

But something changed Jim's purpose he had not anticipated. When he got home he found a note under the door of the little cabin, undoubtedly left by some wagoner or special messenger from the creek settlement. He flushed and his breath came quick as he read the signature, and he pressed his lips to the scrap of paper with a fervent:

"Dear little lady! Only a cold 'Dear Mr. Colby,' but maybe she's changed her mind." The "mind" of Janice Wetherell, a widow of twenty-two, with a little three-year-old child, and who lived at the little settlement at Glasgow creek, was that twenty times she had refused to marry lovelorn Jim Colby. She was wistful, stern, sometimes harsh, when Jim approached her, but he never could fathom her motive in turning him away.

"I'll do it!" cried Jim, influenced suddenly by some strong impulse. "I've always believed that what Janice had against me was my shiftless, roaring ways. I dabbled in mines, horses, land, and never got anywhere. If this oil fever gets me I'll waste time and money, and the steady going little hardware business I've worked up will go to pot. No, sir-ree! I'll keep steadily plodding along, patiently, and see if that helps me any with Janice."

Jim Colby went back downtown. He had a deed to one forty-acre tract made out to Janice Wetherell. The other he put up at auction and Harley Grove, gambler, speculator, bad man generally when aroused, bid it in for one thousand dollars, and his sinister eyes glowed as he realized the bargain he had made.

Then with all eagerness Jim saddled a horse and got down to the creek settlement. The young widow occupied a neat little cottage with her mother and child. She greeted Jim pleasantly, yet with a certain constraint.

"I have sent for you for your own good, Mr. Colby," she said, as they were seated. "Your dead sister was my closest schoolday chum. I have known you and your folks for years. I want to be your friend. They have found oil down the creek. That man Grove war here with experts, who were tramping all over your land. For once, Mr. Colby, don't throw away your chances. They will try to get the land cheap."

"They have already," announced Jim undisturbedly. "I sold one forty to Grove this morning."

"Oh, Mr. Colby!"

"The other I deeded to you."

"Why! I cannot accept it."

"It's on record. If it amounts to anything it's in safe hands. Everything slips through my poor fingers."

"Even you," he added, mournfully.

Her lips trembled, her eyes seemed to pierce his very soul, but she did not speak the wild thought consuming her.

"Go away," she almost sobbed. "Oh, that I have to say it!"

"What's the answer?" communed poor Jim with himself, returning to town. "It seems as if at times she is just going to throw herself in my arms and then again I feel as if she was judging me. What for? I never wronged a single human being that I know of."

And then came a happening that carried the whole township off its feet, and for a time even Jim forgot his love sorrows. At midnight a group of mad, excited horsemen dashed through the town, arousing people from their beds with the thrilling announcement that oil had been struck on Glasgow creek and a two thousand barrel "gusher" was inundating Jim Colby's forty acres.

Jim was at the scene at daylight. Grove was there with a rig gang and friends. Opulence stared him in the face and he could scarcely contain himself. "It was a fair deal. I took the risk in buying," he said to Jim, in his own selfish way believing Jim's mind to be filled with envy of his good luck.

"Oh, yes, the deal was all fair," responded Jim quietly, "only you've made a mistake."

"How is that?"

"You've bored in the wrong place. That gusher is on the land I have made over to Mrs. Wetherell."

The rage, chagrin, bitterness, disappointment of Grove were frightful in their expression. Jim hired some men to confine the flow, then he sought out Mrs. Wetherell.

"You are a rich woman," he told her. "You have heard the news?"

"Yes," she said, "but I am rich only so far as I am your trustee."

"Oh, you think you can sustain that attitude, eh?" railed Jim.

"I shall, in all justice," declared Janice resolutely.

"Well, I'm glad I've done one kind act in the world," said Jim, turning to depart. "Little Clarice and the old folks will never want."

"Jim!"

He had reached the door. That name, for the first time spoken by Janice, electrified him like a pistol shot. He turned in a flash. She was wavering where she stood, her heart seemed bursting. Her arms were outstretched, yet she was shrinking.

"Only Norma Richards," she wailed. "Oh, if she could be banished from my memory. Her cruel abandonment, her miserable death! Oh, Jim!"

He seemed to grow taller, sobler. The truth had suddenly flashed upon him.

"Janice," he said, "do you mean to tell me that all these years you believed it was I who lured poor Norma Richards to elope, married her and then left her to wretchedness and poverty to die in the great city?"

"You were with her in the city."

"Yes; when I discovered her destitute, dying. It was I who took her to her mother. It was I who buried her, the deserted wife of that heartless scoundrel, Harley Grove."

"Oh, Jim, the cruel years! And I doubted you! No, I am unworthy of you!"

But he had her in his arms, and held her there.

"You've Bored in the Wrong Place."

To the Point of Sacrifice.

"Have you given up anything to buy Liberty bonds?"

"No, but I've bought several bonds."

"Well, you haven't bought enough."

60 EXTRA JURORS FOR MURDER CASE

Thomas Malone Will be Tried in County Court Next Monday Charged With the Killing of Joseph Michaeli — Strong Circumstantial Evidence.

In county court Monday afternoon sixty extra jurors were drawn for the Malone murder case, which will be begun next Monday morning, in the county court, County Judge Jenkins presiding.

District Attorney Traver and Assistant District Attorney Hasbrouck will conduct the case for The People. Over forty witnesses will be called.

Malone will be defended by John T. Loughran, a member of the staff of the law school of Fordham University. Mr. Loughran is a former Kingstonian.

The crime which Malone is charged with is one of the most cold blooded crimes in the history of the county and was described at the time in The Freeman by a Freeman man who went to Marlborough shortly after the crime was reported. The facts briefly are these:

Michaeli, moaning, and in a dying condition, was discovered by Vincent Marrano, his employer, on his (Marrano's) pljace, a short distance north of Marlborough, early on the morning of September 27.

Michaeli's skull was crushed in two places, his right ear was badly bruised, his face was scratched as if by finger nails, there were two bruises on his chest and other wounds.

Blood stains covered the spot. There was a trail of blood leading from the main road to the strawberry patch, where Michaeli was found. It looked as if he had been dragged from the road.

The cabin in which Michaeli lived was broken open and Michaeli's watch, articles of clothing and other things had been taken.

Malone was the last person seen with Michaeli. They had been together the night before and had some drinks in a cafe at Marlborough. It is known that Malone had picked a quarrel with Michaeli on several previous occasions. Malone is known as a quarrelsome man when he has been drinking.

Malone was arrested in Newburgh the same day that the crime was discovered. He left Marlborough that morning on a West Shore train, and according to some persons who saw him on the way to the depot, Malone was very much excited and he had a fresh cut on his face.

On November 26, just a day before the crime, Malone was released from the Kingston jail as the grand jury dismissed a charge of grand larceny against him.

He had been accused of stealing a horse and wagon belonging to Mr. Marrano, for whom Malone worked at that time.

The conference officials will arrive in Newburgh on Tuesday, Bishop Wilson meeting his cabinet in the Palatine Hotel at 10 a. m., followed at 2 p. m., by an examination of candidates for the ministry in the chapel of St. John's Church. The session Wednesday afternoon will be but little more in character than a formation of the conference, and the appointment of standing committees and officers of the session. In the evening at 7:45 will be held the annual camp fire of the New York Confrence War Veterans' Association, Past Master Andrew Schriver presiding, at which time Bishop Wilson will deliver a patriotic address. At the latest session of conference the Rev. Clark Wright was elected master to take the place of the Rev. Andrew Schriver. Gallluses Vindicated.

After blaming everything from grape seeds to patent flour for appendicitis, the medical sharks have finally landed on the trousers belt. They say appendicitis never became prevalent until the belt came into general use. For many years the humble suspender has been held up to scorn. Men, if their architecture refused to lend itself to belts, were forced to harbor suspenders as they did a secret sorrow. All sorts of subterfuges were invented, such as invisible suspenders, camouflaged beneath the outergarment. For, be it known, there is none so wretched as the man whose sky line is not adapted to belts, trying to maintain the status quo ante, and look unconcerned at the same time. Now one may wear suspenders and look the world in the face.—Wichita Beacon.

The Gusher

By George Elmer Cobb

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

Oil, nothing but oil—oil leases, oil royalties, oil indications, oil gushers, dry holes, prospects—the air was charged with it, people thought, dreamed, talked of little else.

Even the name of the little town had been changed. Once it was Rosaline, now it was Oil City. Strange men invaded it. Queer machinery rigs came lumbering into town. A saloon sprang up, two of them—an old warehouse was transformed into a temporary hotel, eggs were scarce at any money, board and lodging brought all kinds of fancy prices, provisions had fabulous values, and land—anything near the newly discovered field—was bid for, bartered for, surrounded by a constantly increasing crowd of speculators.

Jim Colby at the little town caught fire with the rest of them. An "Exchange" had been opened by a shrewd lawyer where investors could be supplied with maps, charts, abstracts and guides.

"Think they hit the pick of the earth, eh?" remarked Jim in his easy, dubious way.

"Don't you, Jim?" inquired a friend.

"Well, I've got two forty-acre pieces down at Glasgow creek and never fancied there was oil there. You can have them cheap."

"How cheap? Get your papers. I'll deal on the nail head for cash," eagerly spoke up Harley Grove. He was a man Jim Colby did not like—and for a reason—but Jim said equably enough:

"You've Bored in the Wrong Place."

"I suppose you can bid if you want to," and went home to get the papers covering his two forties.

But something changed Jim's purpose he had not anticipated. When he got home he found a note under the door of the little cabin, undoubtedly left by some wagoner or special messenger from the creek settlement. He flushed and his breath came quick as he read the signature, and he pressed his lips to the scrap of paper with a fervent:

"Dear little lady! Only a cold 'Dear Mr. Colby,' but maybe she's changed her mind." The "mind" of Janice Wetherell, a widow of twenty-two, with a little three-year-old child, and who lived at the little settlement at Glasgow creek, was that twenty times she had refused to marry lovelorn Jim Colby. She was wistful, stern, sometimes harsh, when Jim approached her, but he never could fathom her motive in turning him away.

"I'll do it!" cried Jim, influenced suddenly by some strong impulse. "I've always believed that what Janice had against me was my shiftless, roaving ways. I dabbled in mines, horses, land, and never got anywhere. If this oil fever gets me I'll waste time and money, and the steady going little hardware business I've worked up will go to pot. No, sir-ree! I'll keep steadily plodding along, patiently, and see if that helps me any with Janice."

Jim Colby went back downtown. He had a deed to one forty-acre tract made out to Janice Wetherell. The other he put up at auction and Harley Grove, gambler, speculator, bad man generally when aroused, bid it in for one thousand dollars, and his sinister eyes glowed as he realized the bargain he had made.

Then with all eagerness Jim saddled a horse and got down to the creek settlement. The young widow occupied a neat little cottage with her mother and child. She greeted Jim pleasantly, yet with a certain constraint.

"I have sent for you for your own good, Mr. Colby," she said, as they were seated. "Your dead sister was my closest schooldav chum. I have known you and your folks for years. I want to be your friend. They have found oil down the creek. That man Grove war here with experts, who were tramping all over your land. For once, Mr. Colby, don't throw away your chances. They will try to get the land cheap."

"They have already," announced Jim undisturbedly. "I sold one forty to Grove this morning."

"Oh, Mr. Colby!"

"The other I deeded to you."

"Why! I cannot accept it."

"It's on record. If it amounts to anything it's in safe hands. Everything slips through my poor fingers."

"Even you," he added, mournfully.

Her lips trembled, her eyes seemed to pierce his very soul, but she did not speak the wild thought consuming her.

"Go away," she almost sobbed. "Oh, that I have to say it!"

"What's the answer?" communed poor Jim with himself, returning to town. "It seems as if at times she is just going to throw herself in my arms and then again I feel as if she was judging me. What for? I never wronged a single human being that I know of."

And then came a happening that carried the whole township off its feet, and for a time even Jim forgot his love sorrows. At midnight a group of mad, excited horsemen dashed through the town, arousing people from their beds with the thrilling announcement that oil had been struck on Glasgow creek and a two thousand barrel "gusher" was inundating Jim Colby's forty acres.

Jim was at the scene at daylight. Grove was there with a rig gang and friends. Opulence stared him in the face and he could scarcely contain himself. "It was a fair deal. I took the risk in buying," he said to Jim, in his own selfish way believing Jim's mind to be filled with envy of his good luck.

"Oh, yes, the deal was all fair," responded Jim quietly, "only you've made a mistake."

"How is that?"

"You've bored in the wrong place. That gusher is on the land I have made over to Mrs. Wetherell."

The rage, chagrin, bitterness, disappointment of Grove were frightful in their expression. Jim hired some men to confine the flow, then he sought out Mrs. Wetherell.

"You are a rich woman," he told her. "You have heard the news?"

"Yes," she said, "but I am rich only so far as I am your trustee."

"Oh, you think you can sustain that attitude, eh?" railed Jim.

"I shall, in all justice," declared Janice resolutely.

"Well, I'm glad I've done one kind act in the world," said Jim, turning to depart. "Little Clarice and the old folks will never want."

"Jim!"

He had reached the door. That name, for the first time spoken by Janice, electrified him like a pistol shot. He turned in a flash. She was wavering where she stood, her heart seemed bursting. Her arms were outstretched, yet she was shrinking.

"Only Norma Richards," she wailed. "Oh, if she could be banished from my memory. Her cruel abandonment, her miserable death! Oh, Jim!"

He seemed to grow taller, nobler. The truth had suddenly flashed upon him.

"Janice," he said, "do you mean to tell me that all these years you believed it was I who lured poor Norma Richards to elope, married her and then left her to wretchedness and poverty to die in the great city?"

"You were with her in the city."

"Yes; when I discovered her destitute, dying. It was I who took her to her mother. It was I who buried her, the deserted wife of that heartless scoundrel, Harley Grove."

"Oh, Jim, the cruel years! And I doubted you! No, I am unworthy of you!"

But he had her in his arms, and held her there.

To the Point of Sacrifice.

"Have you given up anything to buy Liberty bonds?"

"No, but I've bought several bonds."

"Well, you haven't bought enough."

COMMUNITY MEETING HELD AT SUNDOWN

Easter Celebration and Patriotic Exercises Combined for Practical Service—Pictures of Bible Land Shown.

On Saturday evening, March 31st, there was held a community meeting at Sundown with a fine attendance of 95. The program opened with patriotic records on the graphophone and these were followed by the singing of several patriotic songs by the whole audience, led by the choir. The attention of the people was called to the urgency of increased raising of poultry, and a poster of suggestions was displayed. A report of Red Cross work was given and also of the sale of Thrift Stamps by a S. S. class. The matter of Junior Four Minute Men in our schools was explained and the plan was urged. Posters impressing the need of increased sale of Thrift Stamps were also displayed. After singing of another patriotic song by the audience, the first slide was thrown on the screen. This was an introduction to the Four Minute address, and read "4 Minute Men 4.—The United States Government presents Mrs. A. W. Dimock, who will speak four minutes. The Committee of Information, appointed by the President."

The subject was the Food Situation, and the extreme necessity for the saving of wheat for our allies and the increased production of all our farms and gardens, was set forth.

Following this, there were displayed about eighty slides of the Holy Land, and the subject of Easter was linked to that of the war, uppermost in our minds. The speaker quoted Harry Lauder, now giving all his time to entertaining the boys in camp, who says: "The thoughts of every man as he goes 'over the top' are of God and immortality." And the following verse was read:

"I know the gallant dead still live;
I know the faith for which they died
Is now, and evermore will be.
The world's one law of life:
That Truth and Righteousness
Are strong as God—
Are God Himself!
These cannot die, nor perish from the earth
This is my Easter creed."

With the singing of America, the Easter Community Meeting was concluded.

CLIFF DWELLERS OF ST. MIHIEL SECTOR

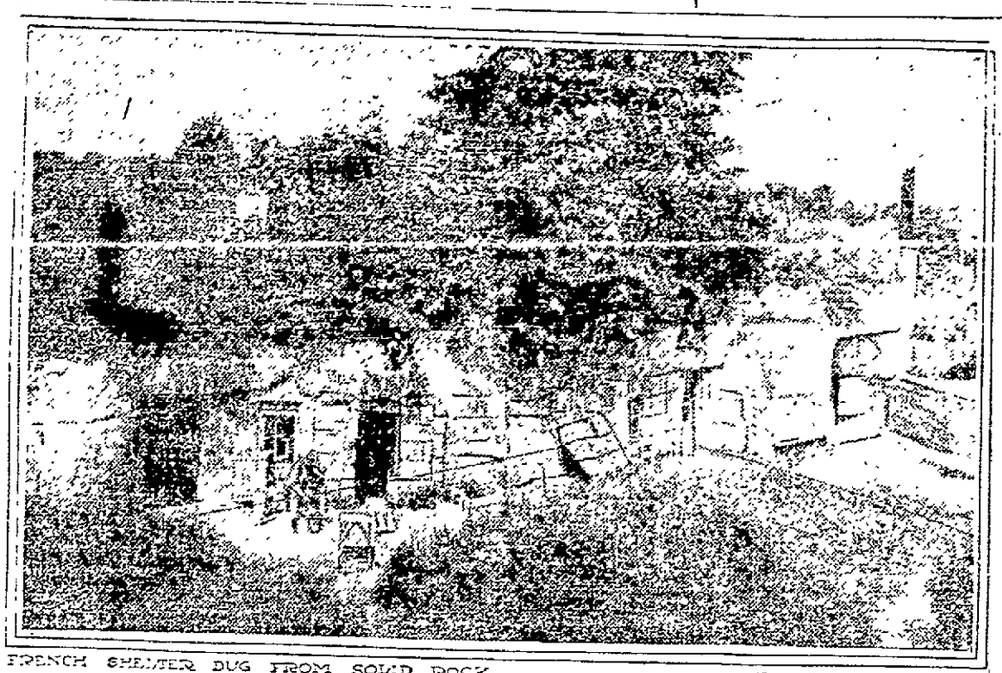
France is famous for her roads and all through that country one sees the quarries from which the rock is taken to build the roads. At the time of the great German attack on Verdun in February, 1916, the salvation of the pivot of the French lines was the transportation system organized by General Petain. He built several hundred miles of roads for automobile transport and thousands of soldiers were kept constantly busy repairing the roads and keeping them in shape for the enormous traffic they had to bear. General Joffre said at that time: "The quarries of France have saved the nation."

But it was not only for road-building that the quarries served. In many places the front line trenches were dug in the solid rock. This was notably true in the St. Mihiel sector, where the French lines faced the apex of the German salient, and along the line of the famous Chemin des Dames. At one place in the latter sector the French trenches were in the face of an abandoned quarry. They were literally a shelf cut in the rock. There was a front wall to the trench but no backwall and thirty yards away the Germans faced them. When the French artillery fired from the hill across the ravine below them, the French soldiers had to leave their trenches, for the French shells flashed across so close to the ground that a man's head would have been taken off if he stood upright in the trench.

In the St. Mihiel sector the face of the quarry was toward the German lines. A shelf in the rock would not suffice there, and the trenches were deep clefts cut into the rock, loopholed for the riflemen and machine guns.

There are other points where the quarries serve for shelters for the support and reserve troops, the second and third lines. The range of modern cannon passes twenty miles and deep and solid shelters must be provided for the reserve as well as for the first line. Whenever it is possible the soldiers take advantage of these old quarries to establish their quarters and they are frequently made into very comfortable bachelor homes.

Our American soldiers are leading today the same life that the French have led for four years. America is now in the stress of battle. We are in the war to win it. Our soldiers are fighting for us in the front line trenches, and we must fight for them here. We must buy Liberty Bands and help them win the war.



FRENCH SHELTER DUG FROM SOLID ROCK.

HARDLY ANY YOUNG PEOPLE IN FRANCE

Their Absence Remarked by Private Klein, Kingston Boy, who Writes Entertainingly of Life in Army.

Extracts from letters recently received from Private Klein of Co. E, 413th Telegraph Battalion, Signal Corps, now in France:

Tuesday, Feb. 19.

Was going to date this "Somewhere Else in France" as we moved again Monday morning.

It was like a tourist party, even though there were fifteen of us piled into a big truck with a lot of kitchen utensils. We traveled about 30 miles or about 50 kilometers, as they say over here.

We came over a fine macadam road through a very picturesque country. Near the city we saw nothing but vineyards, some of them perched way up on the tops of the hills. Right near here it is more of a grain growing country.

It's very interesting to ride through the villages and pass the red tiled farm houses. Seems this is wood gathering time as all along the road the farmer were cutting their hedges and the limbs of their trees. You know they grow their fire wood here. Don't seem to cut the trees down but simply cut off limbs and allow new ones to grow for future use. Every little twig is saved and you see big cart loads of little twigs tied in bundles—stuff that we would never both about.

We are billeted in a small stone and brick building that at the beginning of the war was being remodeled into a little theatre. It was never quite finished. One end of it is built up into a tower about forty feet high. You walk up a winding stairway to the top so winding that you automatically wind your watch as you go dizzily to the top. The roof is flat and there is a tiny 2 x 4 office up there for headquarters. On top of the office is a gilded statue of Joan D' Arc waving a banner. Isn't it a strange coincidence that a signal corps should be quartered under her flag!

We filled our ticks with straw and placed them around the room on the concrete floor. Here's where my comfort kit came in handy, furnishing me with two big blanket pins. Made a nice sleeping bag out of my blankets. It's not any too warm but we have slept in worse places. Bunch tried to get some stoves this morning but we aren't allowed to as can't get the fuel.

Yesterday while our kitchen was being set up we cooked our slum gullion or stew in buckets suspended over a wood fire. By this noon we had most everything ready, even a tent over our bricked up stove. Gee! this morning we had oatmeal with real milk; something we haven't had in ages. Last night we had a dandy camp fire.

Wonder if you have ever heard the Parley Voo song we sing over here. We got the skeleton of it from some English Tommies who were at the docks going back home on the ship that brought us across the channel. One of the verses goes like this:

"Oh the four thirteenth is a hungry bunch, Parley Voo.
Soup for dinner and soup for lunch, Parley Voo.
We'll never get raisin' or pumpkin pie
'Till Hoover gets sick and up and dies.
Inky, pinky—Parley Voo."

(Hoover is the nickname of our mess sergeant.)

Every time anything funny occurs we make a rhyme about it and add another verse to our song. It makes a dandy marching song.

The climate is rather queer. This morning when we got up it was pretty cold, about as cold as you might expect at this time back home. Every time anyone went to the old pump to wash we would play funeral music. There was a nice layer of white frost on the grass. Right now as I write (about 3 p. m.) am sitting on that same grass with my back against the stone wall and no coat on. The sun is so strong it dazzles my eyes to look up at our friend Joan on top of the tower.

We have no place for a mess hall as our ticks make the theatre a pretty crowded place. At noon we sat on the grass and ate our dinner. When the frost is on the ground we have to eat standing up.

Thursday, February 21.

We ate our breakfast in bed this morning. A grass plot makes a dandy mess hall in nice weather but it rained last night and its still drizzling.

When all of us are inside it's pretty crowded. You have to lie on your own tick to keep out of your neighbor's way. Our beds are arranged in tiers, two and almost touch each other. The aisles are only about eight inches wide. Can you imagine how it looks, with barracks bags, knapsacks and all our junk spread around? Am bunked with one end of my tick against the wall so own about three feet of the wall on which I can hang a few things.

They make electric current on the little stream here, which is something that gives a queer twist to the primitive methods. Last night I saw an old cobbler making a pair of wooden shoes with a draw-knife. He was working under an electric light! We saw oxen plowing yesterday but a few hours later we were passed on the road by a priest riding on a bicycle driven by a motor wheel.

We are allowed the regular A. E. F. liberty from 5 to 8:30 p. m. Doesn't do us much good as they take in the sidewalks when it gets dark—what few sidewalks there are. By 7 p. m. the village seems to be in a deep sleep.

There are hardly any young people here, though there are an awful bunch of kids about, they pester us with "cigaret American" as they follow us about as if we belonged to a Barnum & Bailey side show.

We are picking up French slowly. Guess when we get home we will all be talking with our hands. One of our sergeants tells this story on himself. He went into a store to buy a pair of socks. He went through all the motions of putting on a pair, parley vooing all the time. Finally the storekeeper stopped smiling and said in real American, "What in h— do you want."

We frequently run across a Frenchie who has lived in England.

Last evening I took a walk over to the railroad station. There is a little "round house" here but it's square instead of being round as we build them. "Some" locomotives. If you wanted [illegible] Ashokan dam the chances are they couldn't make the grade up Stony Hollow and would have to be crated and a couple of them packed in an ordinary box car and hauled there.

Saturday a. m., 23rd.

We hiked to a little village near here Thurday afternoon and rested there a few minutes. 'Twas as if you stood in Higginsville and Hunt's circus was coming in. The entire population gathered about standing with open mouths gaping at the wonderful sight. There were a couple of hundred old women and children and perhaps a dozen old men. I always thought the French a demonstrative people but here, as at other places, there was no noise or waving of hands. They simply stare at you. Though they welcome us I suppose they are too weary for the light stuff.

Not going to blow about my French. Last night went into a place and asked for some "Byrrh." This is not beer but a much advertised drink. What do you suppose we got? Butter!

Tuesday, February 26.

Monday it rained nearly all day so we couldn't do anything. A popular tune was "I wish this was the end of a miserable day." Then we got a little stove and the atmosphere changed. Surprising how much cheerfulness a little fire can throw out. The stove is about the size of three tin cans set on top of each other. The pipe is the hand-made sheet iron kind they use over here and was bought by the kilogram. Still it felt fine to sit around it last night and sing "Pack all your trouble in your old kit big and smile, smile, smile."

Even though our battalion is split up we have quite a big orchestra in our company. Two violins, three mandolins, a clarinet and a cornet. We miss our phonograph but probably the two companies will take turns with it.

Saturday, March 2.

Hope you got letter saying I was moving again. We left "there" about 7 a. m. passing through the city we had lived in a few weeks previously. Had only half an hour there—leaving in the Dark Ages (13:50) and arriving here in the Future. Had our supper—about 19:30 (o'clock). Though we rode in third class carriages it was in more modern equipment than on that first troop train and there being only a small detail we were but four to a compartment. I have slept on the floor of a little tent and on the concrete floor of a theater but last night I threw my coat over a hay rack and my haversack in a manger, but lordy, we had a dandy bed and a good mattress, even if it was in a horse stable. My, but it felt unnatural to get into a bed after sleeping on the floor for two weeks.

What do you think, I met Walter Baisden at dinner today. Sat down at same table. I didn't recognize him but he did me. He looks fine and has grown much stouter. Says he met Meyer Kaplan a few days ago. Walt is located right here in the same city, which I hope will be my home for a few months.

This is one of the big cities and quite a large base is located here, so we have Y. M. C. A.'s, commissary, etc. I have not been located near a regular Y. M. C. A. for about a month and I can't tell you what a big difference this makes. I can't praise them too highly.

We are allowed to come and go at will and liberty until 10 every night besides we can get theater passes good till 11:30 p. m. Expect to get to work Monday morning.

Sunday Afternoon.

Over in the "Y" again near a roaring hot fire where my shoes can dry. It has been snowing and raining since Friday and we have to walk around in mud and water wherever we go. We got a stove for our stable today so from now on we will be more comfortable.

The eats here are pretty good and it's the first time since we have been in the army that we could get into a mess line without our mess gear. We are waited on by a bunch of darkies and after we finish we don't even have to wash our dishes. You don't appreciate that unless you have stood in a long line in the rain with dirty mess gear waiting your turn to dip 'em in the pail and wash (?) them.

Being on Detached Service we don't have to rise at reveille so we didn't get up till after ten. This is the first time that has happened in about three months.

In our barracks and ones near here we see hundreds of men belonging to small details like ours. In a small crowd we often see half a dozen different colored hat cords.

We walked about a mile through the mud today on a rumor that some mail had arrived for us but it was false.

COMMUNITY MEETING HELD AT SUNDOWN

Easter Celebration and Patriotic Exercises Combined for Practical Service—Pictures of Bible Lands Shown.

On Saturday evening, March 31st, there was held a community meeting at Sundown with a fine attendance of 95. The program opened with patriotic records on the graphophone and these were followed by the singing of several patriotic songs by the whole audience, led by the choir. The attention of the people was called to the urgency of increased raising of poultry, and a poster of suggestions was displayed. A report of Red Cross work was given and also of the sale of Thrift Stamps by a S. S. class. The matter of Junior Four Minute Men in our schools was explained and the plan was urged. Posters impressing the need of increased sale of Thrift Stamps were also displayed. After singing of another patriotic song by the audience, the first slide was thrown on the screen. This was an introduction to the Four Minute address, and read "4 Minute Men 4.—The United States Government presents Mrs. A. W. Dimock, who will speak four minutes. The Committee of Information, appointed by the President."

The subject was the Food Situation, and the extreme necessity for the saving of wheat for our allies and the increased production of all our farms and gardens, was set forth.

Following this, there were displayed about eighty slides of the Holy Land, and the subject of Easter was linked to that of the war, uppermost in our minds. The speaker quoted Harry Lauder, now giving all his time to entertaining the boys in camp, who says: "The thoughts of every man as he goes 'over the top' are of God and immortality." With the singing of America, the Easter Community Meeting was concluded.

We saw oxen plowing yesterday but a few hours later we were passed on the road by a priest riding on a bicycle driven by a motor wheel.

We are allowed the regular A. E. F. liberty from 5 to 8:30 p. m. Doesn't do us much good as they take in the sidewalks when it gets dark—what few sidewalks there are. By 7 p. m. the village seems to be in a deep sleep.

There are hardly any young people here, though there are an awful bunch of kids about, they pester us with "cigaret American' as they follow us about as if we belonged to a Barnum & Bailey side show.

We are picking up French slowly. Guess when we get home we will all be talking with our hands. One of our sergeants tells this story on himself. He went into a store to buy a pair of socks. He went through all the motions of putting on a pair, parley vooing all the time. Finally the storekeeper stopped smiling and said in real American, "What in h—do you want."

We frequently run across a Frenchie who has lived in England.

Last evening I took a walk over to the railroad station. There is a little "round house" here but it's square instead of being round as we build them. "Some" locomotives. If you wanted to use them on the Ashokan dam the chances are they couldn't make the grade up Stony Hollow and would have to be crated and a couple of them packed in an ordinary box car and hauled there.

Saturday a. m., 23rd.

We hiked to a little village near here Thurday afternoon and rested there a few minutes. 'Twas as if you stood in Higginsville and Hunt's circus was coming in. The entire population gathered about standing with open mouths gaping at the wonderful sight. There were a couple of hundred old women and children and perhaps a dozen old men. I always thought the French a demonstrative people but here, as at other places, there was no noise or waving of hands. They simply stare at you. Though they welcome us I suppose they are too weary for the light stuff.

Not going to blow about my French. Last night went into a place and asked for some "Byrrh." This is not beer but a much advertised drink. What do you suppose we got? Butter!

Tuesday, February 26.

Monday it rained nearly all day so we couldn't do anything. A popular tune was "I wish this was the end of a miserable day." Then we got a little stove and the atmosphere changed. Surprising how much cheerfulness a little fire can throw out. The stove is about the size of three tin cans set on top of each other. The pipe is the hand-made sheet iron kind they use over here and was bought by the kilogram. Still it felt fine to sit around it last night and sing "Pack all your trouble in your old kit big and smile, smile, smile."

Even though our battalion is split up we have quite a big orchestra in our company. Two violins, three mandolins, a clarinet and a cornet. We miss our phonograph but probably the two companies will take turns with it.

Saturday, March 2.

Hope you got letter saying I was moving again. We left "there" about 7 a. m. passing through the city we had lived in a few weeks previously. Had only half an hour there—leaving in the Dark Ages (13:50) and arriving here in the Future. Had our supper—about 19:30 (o'clock). Though we rode in third class carriages it was in more modern equipment than on that first troop train and there being only a small detail we were but four to a compartment.

I have slept on the floor of a little tent and on the concrete floor of a theater but last night I threw my coat over a hay rack and my haversack in a manger, but lordy, we had a dandy bed and a good mattress, even if it was in a horse stable. My, but it felt unnatural to get into a bed after sleeping on the floor for two weeks.

What do you think, I met Walter Baisden at dinner today. Sat down at same table. I didn't recognize him but he did me. He looks fine and has grown much stouter. Says he met Meyer Kaplan a few days ago. Walt is located right here in the same city, which I hope will be my home for a few months.

This is one of the big cities and quite a large base is located here, so we have Y. M. C. A.'s, commissary, etc. I have not been located near a regular Y. M. C. A. for about a month and I can't tell you what a big difference this makes. I can't praise them too highly.

We are allowed to come and go at will and liberty until 10 every night besides we can get theater passes good till 11:30 p. m. Expect to get to work Monday morning.

Sunday Afternoon.

Over in the "Y" again near a roaring hot fire where my shoes can dry. It has been snowing and raining since Friday and we have to walk around in mud and water wherever we go. We got a stove for our stable today so from now on we will be more comfortable.

The eats here are pretty good and it's the first time since we have been in the army that we could get into a mess line without our mess gear. We are waited on by a bunch of darkies and after we finish we don't even have to wash our dishes. You don't appreciate that unless you have stood in a long line in the rain with dirty mess gear waiting your turn to dip 'em in the pail and wash (?) them.

Being on Detached Service we don't have to rise at reveille so we didn't get up till after ten. This is the first time that has happened in about three months.

In our barracks and ones near here we see hundreds of men belonging to small details like ours. In a small crowd we often see half a dozen different colored hat cords.

We walked about a mile through the mud today on a rumor that some mail had arrived for us but it was false.
